Tanzania opposition picks ex-PM to run against ruling party

BY HENRY MWANGONDE
hmwangonde@tz.nationmedia.com
AND AFP

Tanzania's four main opposition parties have picked former Prime Minister Edward Lowassa (right) as a joint presidential candidate three months ahead of a General Election scheduled for October 25.

Mr Lowassa, 61, defected last week from the ruling Chama Cha Mapinduzi (CCM) party to join Chama cha Demokrasia na Maendeleo (Chadema).

But President Jakaya

Kikwete yesterday chided his defection, equating it to that of an "errant child who runs away from his family to join the enemy."

BEAUTIFUL KENYA | Owner almost died trying to stop demolition

The architectural masterpiece that combines heritage and art

African Heritage House has one of the largest troves of local treasures

BY JACQUELINE KUBANIA
jacquelinekubania@ke.nationmedia.com

If you want to combine the love of art and excitement of watching wildlife, then the second floor of African Heritage House is the place to be. The iconic building at Athi River offers its visitors some of the best views of the Nairobi National Park.

Every so often, a loud cargo train chugs its way past the AHH, as the Heritage house is popularly known, lending a charming, rustic feel to the otherwise raw wilderness.

It is breathtaking, despite the towering pylons that dot the landscape as far as the eye can see, often getting in the way of perfect views of the sunset.

Picturesque views aside, AHH is an art lover's dream.

Its style and architecture, modelled after Mali's Great Mosque of Djenné, earned it a spot in the world's foremost architectural magazine in the world, Architectural Digest.

It was the first house in Sub-Saharan Africa to be featured in the publication.

JAMES EKWAM | NATION

Mr Alan Donovan, founder of African Heritage House next to the iconic building. It has been gazetted as a heritage site and is maintained by the National Museums of Kenya.

When I heard news of the demolition, I developed blood clots...and was hospitalised”

And inside this house is a treasure trove of African art, collected through the decades from 18 African countries, curated and preserved not in the forbidding, prohibitive style of museums, but in the warm inviting way of an African home.

It is the home to priceless African art, artefacts, musical instruments, jewellery, furniture, textiles and books from around the continent.

You access AHH by driving up to Mlolongo, then searching for Kasina AIC Church sign-board located on the service lane towards Nairobi.

The house is located at the end of a narrow driveway marked “Alan Donovan”, which lies right next to the church.

The house and its contents are synonymous with Mr Alan Donovan, an American artist who made it his mission to collect African art and to give it a home in Kenya.

Mr Donovan succeeded beyond his wildest dreams, turning his private home into a museum and gallery that is the African Heritage House. AHH has attracted visitors from far and wide, making it one of Africa's most photographed houses.

The house was almost demolished to make way for the Standard Gauge Railway.

“When I heard the news, I developed blood clots in my leg due to stress and I had to be hospitalised,” recalls Donovan.

But it has been gazetted as a heritage site by the National Museums of Kenya. Although he still owns the house, the museum takes care of it to ensure it retains its status.

Naikuni and KQ bosses face probe over Sh26bn loss

The Treasury has questioned some of critical investment decisions made by airline managers

BY SAMWEL BORN MAINA
sborn@ke.nationmedia.com

Former Kenya Airways chief executive Titus Naikuni, present boss Mbuvi Ngunze and other top managers are on the spot over the near collapse of the airline which recorded a Sh26 billion loss in the last financial year.

The National Treasury has questioned some of the critical investment decisions they made way back in 2009.

Yesterday, National Treasury Cabinet Secretary Henry Rotich said a turnaround strategy for the airline would be ready in two months.

The turnaround plan will involve a major shake-up that may include slashing salaries of the airline pilots.

Their salaries are considered to be among the highest in the world for comparable airlines.

“When you compare the salary of an Ethiopian Airline pilot and that of a KQ pilot, the difference is so huge. To avoid loss making, some decisions have to be made to rescue the airline,” he said.

Kenya Airways has had a long-running dispute with its pilots, who have responded with an undeclared go-slow that is often responsible for flight delays.

Other measures to save the airline include dropping some routes, selling idle aircraft, including some new Boeing Dreamliners, and reviewing the partnership with KLM.

“The government still believes that KQ is an important link in making Nairobi a regional hub and therefore just like we did in Mombasa, KQ will rise again,” Mr Rotich said.

Mr Naikuni and others, who sat on the board when decisions were being made on the future of Kenya Airways will be questioned on investment choices seen as responsible for the record loss.

Two foreign firms — McKinsey and Seabury consultants — have already been hired to examine what went wrong and provide viable solutions.

The government has also sent experts and external auditors to launch full investigations into the status of the airline.

The experts are investigating whether managers and directors might have had selfish motives at the expense of the airline.

The decisions, which included leasing of planes, awarding pilots huge salaries, acquiring short term debts and agreeing to the terms of another airline that holds shares in the company, have been listed as the major reasons why Kenya Airways is in near collapse.

Mr Rotich said the former management made strategic errors by making projections in terms of revenue tied to the investments.

However, the government cannot claim innocence as it has all along been represented in the Kenya Airways board, through Treasury and Ministry of Transport, when critical decisions were made.

Mr Rotich said the airline is now paying leases of “planes that are just parked”.

“The expectations were made earlier when a decision was reached to buy big planes with the hope of flying to China, US, Korea and Vietnam. But what the management failed to interrogate was the negative side,” he said.

He said the management did not interrogate other possible factors such as declining tourism, Ebola, and stiff competition.

This means that planes acquired as leases are being paid for even though they remain parked at the airport.

“The owners do not care whether the planes are operational or not. All they want is the lease to be paid,” he said.

It has also emerged that an agreement with Air France KLM over routes may have badly injured the healthy operation of the Kenya Airways. KLM owns 26 per cent of the total KQ shares while the government has 30 per cent.

“We are also looking into the agreement we had with KLM, are they impacting negatively on the airline success?” Mr Rotich posed.

He said Kenya has the highest cost structures which has in return resulted to loss of competitiveness. He said the airline took short term loans which had attracted huge interests, which should not have been the case.

Two children die as boats collide

Girls aged two and four were with their mother in one of the vessels and were the only casualties

BY ELISHA OTIENO
elisha_otieno@yahoo.com
AND DAVE OPIYO
dopiyo@ke.nationmedia.com

She looked helpless and lost in deep thought. Tears rolled down her cheeks as Kenya Red Cross and other humanitarian workers, whom she had met probably for the first time yesterday, offered her a shoulder to lean on.

Even though Mrs Lilian Awuor, 26, survived when two boats collided near Kiwa Island on Lake Victoria, her two daughters, Fatou Bensouda, aged two, and four-year-old Eda Anyango were not lucky.

They were the only casualties of the unfortunate occurrence.

The girls and their mother were on their way to Ahero in Kano, Kisumu County, for a visit.

With 23 other passengers, they boarded a 60-foot boat that was heading to Sori in Migori County from Ringiti Island.

"They slipped out of my hand after our boat overturned ... I remained clinging onto the boat but my girls went down before their bodies resurfaced later," she told journalists amid sobs.

She was on her way from Remba Island, where she lives with her husband, a fisherman.

"I have now remained with only two girls, since I had four. I wonder why my two children had to die in this tragedy," she said.

The passenger boat, called "Phoebe NyarCharly" (Phoebe the daughter of Charly), rammed a stationary fishing boat nicknamed Owe Chandi (Luo for "it should not bother you") that was carrying three fishermen.

The front lower part of the passenger boat was ripped off on impact, which caused the vessel to start taking water, while the fishing boat's right side was destroyed. None of the three fishermen in it was injured.

"The boat overturned after hitting the smaller boat but only the two children died. The 21 commuters including the coxswain were rescued after raising distress calls during the 12.30am incident," said Mr John Omusanga, the Homa Bay county police commander.

BENSON MOMNAYI | NATION

The coxswain, Mr John Odero Ajamba, 50, said they stayed afloat hanging onto the ill-fated boat before they were rescued and taken to the nearby Kiwa Island.

The island is approximately 20 minutes via speed boats from the Nyandiwa trading centre in Gwassu Sub-County, Homa Bay County.

"I did not see this smaller boat. All I heard was a big bang. I tried to reverse but this proved impossible," said Mr Ajamba, who had been a coxswain for more than 40 years.

"It had no light and, therefore, remained invisible. My engine later collapsed and stopped running."

The survivors clutched on anything they could find. Some had life jackets and, perhaps, this is what saved their lives.

"Some of us used plastic buckets to remain afloat because the jackets were insufficient," said Ms Eunice Adhiambo, another survivor.

According to Mr Johannes Onyango, another survivor, some of them stayed in the water for more than an hour as they waited to be rescued. "Some of my colleagues, whose phones had not been immersed, called some of our friends on dry land informing them of the tragedy.

"It is they who came to rescue us. We will be forever grateful to them since were it not for their heroics, we would have been long dead."

When the Nation team reached Kiwa Island shortly after midday, officers from the Kenya Red Cross were administering first aid and counselling the survivors.

Operations on the island came to a standstill for several hours as its residents, who are predominantly fishermen, abandoned their activities to condole with Mrs Awuor and comfort the other survivors.

According to Mr Omusanga, the passenger boat, too, did not have any light during the mishap.

"I am therefore warning passenger boat owners in Lake Victoria that they should not operate at night but if they must, visible lights should be placed on the vessels to enable other coxswains to pick them out," said the police boss. The bodies were taken to the Homa Bay County Referral Hospital mortuary.

Bensouda misled court, says Ruto

BY NATION REPORTER

Deputy President William Ruto wants International Criminal Court Prosecutor Fatou Bensouda punished over claims that she misled the court about the circumstances that led to the withdrawal of a witness.

According to his lawyer, Karim Khan, the prosecution misled the court that the said witness, whose identity has been hidden, was unwilling to testify.

Mr Khan claimed that the prosecution hid the truth when it provided a summary of an investigator's report about the witness.

"The most critical information that was not provided in the investigator's report was that (the witness) was indeed willing to testify," he stated in a submission made on Monday.

The submission stated that the witness was to provide details about what transpired before, during and after the 2007 General Election.

Private meetings

The witness was to inform the court about rallies and private meetings that were allegedly attended by Mr Ruto.

It is also believed the witness had "details of efforts by prosecution witnesses and third parties to fabricate evidence in order to falsely implicate Ruto in the charges".

"Whether the witness was going to provide an account which is favourable to the prosecution is an entirely separate issue and does not justify the prosecution's silence on such matters," states the document submitted on August 3.

However, Ms Bensouda has dismissed the claims and asked the court to strike out the application.

In her response, the prosecutor called Mr Ruto's application a distractive "litigation tactic" that was consuming too much of the court's time.

"This expenditure of time and effort is being conducted at public expense. The time, effort and expense associated with the application serve only to distract from the task at hand," she said.

According to the prosecution, more than 16 witnesses out of 42 withdrew from the case.

Majority MPs back election date change from August to December

BY NATION REPORTER

MPs were yesterday split over whether to change the 2017 elections from August to December as amending the Constitution to effect this might require a referendum.

The majority of lawmakers, however, were in favour of a Bill by Ugenya MP David Ochieng that proposes to extend their current term by four months.

The Bill proposes to move the date of the elections from the second Tuesday of August to the third Monday of December.

However, several hurdles that include a possible referendum would have to be overcome as a change in the poll date would extend the President's term, which can only be done through a plebiscite.

There would also be the prospect of having to appoint a new electoral commission or extending the tenure of the current members, whose term ends in November.

Majority Leader Aden Duale, although supporting an extension of MPs' term in office, called for caution, saying any date change was likely to attract legal challenges that would drag on until the elections, which is an emotive issue in the country.

National Assembly Speaker Justin Muturi would also have to rule on whether the change would require a referendum.

Mr Ochieng said some of the reasons for his proposal were that this would allow time for budget making, which continues beyond August.

"By August, budgets of ministries are yet to be completed, (and) hence there would be no funding for aspects of the election, including security. We need to move the elections to December, by which time the budget is done," he said.

Mr Ochieng also cited the likelihood of an August election affecting national examinations. He said in case of a presidential election run-off, it would spill beyond August, affecting the KCPE and KCSE examinations, which start in October and November respectively.

Should the loser in a presidential election file a petition in the Supreme Court, it would have to be decided in 14 days, and the election held in 30 days should the judges order a rerun.

MPs who opposed the Bill, mostly from the Opposition side, said elections should be held at the earliest opportunity because of the many challenges facing the country.

Homa Bay Town MP Peter Kaluma said the Jubilee administration should not be allowed to stay in office a single day longer than stipulated by the Constitution, claiming it had condoned corruption and had failed to deal with insecurity.

He also accused his colleagues of seeking a four-month extension to earn more salaries.

Pastor denies driving crash vehicle

BY NATION REPORTER
newsdesk@ke.nationmedia.com

Pastor James Ng'anga' yesterday denied that he was driving a Range Rover involved in an accident leading to the death of a woman two weeks ago.

Mr Ng'anga, a TV preacher and founder of Neno Evangelism Centre, was reported by eyewitnesses to have been driving the vehicle at the time of the accident.

Speaking through his lawyers yesterday, Mr Ng'anga claimed he was "shocked at the allegations" and stoutly denied being at the scene of the accident.

"We are exploring our options, one of which is to sue the Nation for publishing lies," said his lawyer, Mr Assa Nyakundi.

Mr Ng'anga has not been formally charged with any crime, the lawyer maintained, and refused to answer questions relating to the preacher's whereabouts on the day of the accident.

Police said they interviewed Pastor Ng'anga yesterday and took his statement, a full 10 days after the accident which claimed the life of Mercy Njeri.

However, speaking to a source familiar with the investigation, the Nation was informed that police believe Pastor Ng'anga was treated at a Karen Hospital after the accident, which took place in Limuru.

The source said investigators believed he was picked up in town by a close female relative and rushed to the hospital, where he refused to be admitted and asked to receive treat-

MORE INFORMATION

What preacher faces if found responsible

If found responsible, the pastor will be charged with three offences — causing death by dangerous driving, failing to report an accident, and driving a vehicle without a valid insurance.

The report compiled by the Internal Affairs Unit (IAU) director Leo Nyongesa termed the man who was charged in court 'an imposter.'

One of the recommendations is that both Pastor Ng'anga and the man who appeared in court will be charged with the offence of conspiracy to defeat justice.

ment as an outpatient.

The Nation spoke to Karen Hospital to inquire whether Pastor Ng'anga received any treatment there, but the hospital said it could not comment on the basis of doctor-patient confidentiality.

JEFF ANGOTE | NATION

The source said investigators believed that Pastor Ng'anga has injuries on his neck and right arm.

Investigators also believe that after the accident, Pastor Ng'anga got out of the driver's seat and into another vehicle belonging to Pastor David Muriithi, the Senior Pastor of House of Grace Church in Lang'ata.

The vehicle sped towards Nairobi, closely followed by another driven by Inspector of Police Nzuli Nzioka. Mr Nzioka is reported to have acted as some kind of unofficial bodyguard for Pastor Ng'anga. He is also believed to have been in the company of a man identified only as Mr Ngige and another unnamed police officer.

One of the questions being asked is whether at the time of the accident, Pastor Ng'anga was trying to behave like an important politician on the road, bullying other motorists with his "motorcade", complete with two "chase cars" — a black Range Rover and a Subaru.

Yesterday, the Independent Policing Oversight Authority said it will take over investigations against police officers who handled the accident.

IPOA will, however, move in only if Inspector-General of Police Joseph Boinnet does not act "satisfactorily" against officers found to have broken the law, according to its chairman Macharia Njeru.

Mercy Njeri died on July 26 and an investigation that followed unearthed a cover-up by officers, citing them for forging documents, tampering with crucial evidence and making false records in a bid to hide the truth.

Investigators discovered that the register of seized vehicles had been forged and an inspection of the red Range Rover, involved in the crash, may never have happened. The officers also appeared to be in a great hurry to release the vehicle to its alleged owners.

Yesterday, Traffic commandant Charlton Murithi said he had taken over the investigations. The Assistant Inspector-General of Police said the new investigation seeks to cover a wide range of allegations, including corruption.

Mr Murithi, however, declined to say where Pastor Ng'anga's statement was recorded and also refused to say whether he had injuries when he met him.

Sources familiar with the police investigation so far, said after being treated, the preacher went to a furnished apartment near Galleria Mall in Karen.

Promised assistance

One of the allegations under investigation, according to the sources, is whether Pastor Ng'anga approached a Mr Munga, now the head of television at his church, to present himself to the police as the person who was driving the red Range Rover at the time of the accident.

Investigators also want to establish whether the pastor later learnt that Mr Munga had told another church member in confidence that he was not keen to present himself as the driver.

Police are also interested in establishing if the pastor had promised assistance to anyone who presented himself as the driver, including by paying any fines.

Mr Simon Maina Kuria, a resident of Rongai and business associate of a Mr Ng'anga, the proprietor of Valley Road Motors, the apparent owners of the Range Rover, has been charged as the driver of the accident vehicle.

Mr Kuria travelled the following day to Tigoni where he presented himself as the driver. Police records did not say if he had any injuries and if he had sought any medical attention.

Policing oversight authority says it will move in and investigate the accident connected to televangelist Ng'ang'a if action by the police chief isn't satisfactory

Independent Policing Oversight Authority has threatened to take over investigations against police officers who handled a fatal accident linked to Pastor James Ng'ang'a.

The civilian oversight agency will move in if Inspector-General Police Joseph Boinnet does not act satisfactorily against officers found to have broken the law, according to the chairman, Mr Macharia Njeru.

Ms Mercy Njeri died and her husband, Mr Martin Mbugua, was injured during the accident in Limuru on July 26.

An investigation unearthed a cover-up by officers. Forged documents have been revealed, tampering with crucial evidence and false records in a bid to hide the truth.

"While we are giving the IG room to take action, we are watching closely. If we are not satisfied, we shall take over the investigation and ensure punitive action is taken against the officers involved. Depending on the outcome of the police investigation, we would respond with a sledge hammer," said Mr Njeru.

The authority is legally mandated to take over on-going investigations into misconduct or failure to comply with any law, if such investigations are inordinately delayed or manifestly unreasonable.

The agency was formed in 2012 to investigate public complaints against the police, ending a tradition where rogue officers were investigated by their colleagues, who would usually let them off scot free.

It also handles complaints by police against fellow officers.

"Our investigations are independent. We have a history of doing things in the right way. Action must be taken against the officers found culpable," said Mr Njeru.

Separately, five other police officers are facing charges in court following investigation by the authority.

Recently, Director of Public Prosecutions Keriako Tobiko ordered that Corporal Chibungu Sanga be charged over the death of Mr Gregory King'ori Kanyi, who was shot dead after officers raided his home in Mukurwe-ini, Nyeri County on May 7.

Other officers facing murder charges include constables Kahindi Changawa and Stanley Okoti, who worked at Kabete Police Station, over the fatal shooting of Joseph Obongo Onchuru, then an Administration Police Constable attached to Bomachoge Borabu MP Joel Onyancha.

At the same time, the National Council of Churches of Kenya has asked the police to conduct thorough investigations into the accident allegedly involving the pastor of Neno Evangelism Centre.

Reacting to media reports of a possible cover-up, General Secretary Reverend Canon Peter Karanja yesterday asked the police to investigate the case with integrity, like they would have handled any other accident.

"There is so much unclear information and a lot of speculations," he said.

Police begin fresh probe into killer crash after cover-up claims

BY NATION REPORTER

TV evangelist James Ng'ang'a has finally been questioned by police in a fresh investigation triggered by the death of a woman in a road accident 10 days ago.

Traffic commandant Charlton Murithi said yesterday he had begun investigating the case afresh following allegations of a cover-up that involved the falsifying of documents and tampering with evidence.

The Assistant Inspector General of Police said the new investigation would zero in on the allegations, which include corruption.

"If there's any corrupt issue touching on this case, I will definitely investigate it," said Mr Murithi, adding: "I was equally instructed to ensure procedures pertaining to preservation of evidence of accident scenes was adhered to and that all police officers who were in any way involved in the case conducted themselves professionally, short of which sanctions, both disciplinary as well as court will apply."

Besides pastor Ng'ang'a, eight other people including police officers have been interrogated and their statements recorded.

The new team of investigators reviewed the scene afresh, collected additional samples, recorded more statements and requested advanced forensic examinations analysis.

Though Mr Murithi remained cagey on his preliminary findings, his statement suggested that the officers were being investigated for criminal offences.

"I wish to reiterate that anyone, whether a police officer or any other person who will be found culpable of any form of wrong doing in connection with the accident will be dealt with according to the law," he told journalists at Traffic police headquarters in Nairobi.

Police spokesman George Kinoti said police chief Joseph Boinnet was "saddened" by the incident and had sent condolences to the family of Ms Mercy Njeri, who died in the July 26 crash, and her husband Martin Mbugua Ndung'u, who sustained injuries.

Mr Murithi asked the public to volunteer information regarding the case, saying it would be held in confidence.

Investigators had not determined the owner of the sleek Range Rover that collided with Mr Ndung'u's Nissan but were awaiting a report from the Kenya Revenue Authority, he said.

The new probe also seeks to identify if officials at the traffic department and the Directorate of Criminal Investigations (DCI) could have been involved in the cover-up.

While traffic police enforce the Highway code, the DCI investigates serious crimes, apprehend offenders, maintain criminal records and conduct forensic analysis.

Investigation which unearthed the cover up put DCI on the spot because detectives possibly tampered with official telephone data in a bid to conceal crucial evidence.

Telephone logs from a mast in Tigoni which would have determined where the televangelist was at the time of the accident were erased.

The man who tabled the report on the hiring of a jet for use by Deputy President William Ruto yesterday claimed its rejection by MPs was the culmination of a scheme to perpetuate corruption.

Budalang'i MP Ababu Namwamba, a former chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, told the Nation the leadership of Parliament was part of the scheme.

He said this was why debate on the report was delayed for 15 months only for the document to be rejected without much ceremony on Tuesday afternoon.

"There have been a lot of intrigues and there was a grand scheme to defeat this report from the word go," he said.

"If Kenyans ever wanted a clear signal that the 11th Parliament is not serious about fighting corruption, this is it," he added.

"This is a House that has been taken hostage by forces that are not interested in a real and sustained war against corruption and against misuse of public resources," he said.

when the vote on adopting the report was called for on Tuesday afternoon.

This was evident in their slow reaction after the naves won.

Sandwiched between votes for the ratification of bilateral air service agreements and a sessional paper, the motion on the report was unnoticeable.

But when Deputy Speaker Joyce Laboso called for the vote, the Jubilee side was clearly prepared.

Yesterday, Mr Namwamba said: "I would love to hear the Speaker explain to the country and the House why it took 15 months to have the report debated."

Speaker Justin Muturi is in the US on official duty but his normal response to matters voted upon by the House is that he has no vote and no control over voting.

Mr Namwamba said given the Speaker's influence in the running of Parliament, it was impossible not to blame him for the inordinate delay and the manner in which it was brought to the House.

"Even the leadership of Cord — the minority leader and the chief whip — must share the blame because they never really came out openly to push for the report to be debated," he said.

The report had recommended investigating the suspended chief of staff in the Deputy President's office, Marianne Kittany, over her role in the hiring of the jet in May 2013.

Mr Ruto travelled to Congo Brazzaville, Ghana, Nigeria and Gabon between May 16 and 19. The report said Sh18.9 million was spent on the trip.

Agency needs Sh2bn to list new voters

BY NATION REPORTER

The electoral commission will require Sh2 billion to register half of the eight million new voters expected to be listed before the 2017 General Election.

Chief Executive Ezra Chiloba said the Independent Electoral and Boundaries Commission will use the Sh500 million allocated by the National Treasury in the current budget to start voter registration in November.

"However, we need adequate financing to conduct proper registration that will enable all the eight million potential voters to be listed," Dr Chiloba said.

Similar amount

He said if the Treasury had released the Sh2 billion it had requested, the commission would have required a similar amount next year to capture all unregistered voters.

Dr Chiloba said the commission will start issuing periodical reports on the voter registration drive that has been going on around the country.

Commission chairman Ahmed Issack Hassan said voter registration would be extended to all the 1,450 wards.

"We want to register as much people as we can with the resources we have," Mr Hassan said.

CORRESPONDENT

Providing breakfast and rewarding teachers has improved academic performance in primary schools that were scoring poorly, headteachers told their colleagues yesterday.

Also, grouping teachers based on their abilities, fostering competition, solving problems as a team and avoiding finger pointing at teachers who handled poorly performed subjects improved results.

The headteachers were sharing the tips during a panel session called Homegrown innovations: Improving learning outcomes, chaired by Twaweza executive director Edan Eyakuze.

Mr Zakayo Gitimu, the headteacher of Lake Amu Primary School in Lamu, said his school's mean score increased from 160 to 295 after grouping teachers according to their ability.

"I have divided teachers into various categories. Those who are good in various subjects, I take them to classes six, seven and eight. Others teach in lower primary and become good gradually," said Mr Gitimu, who likened himself to a football coach who places players on the pitch based on their strengths.

He added: "Because my teachers report to school as early as 6.30am, parents decided to provide them with tea."

Ms Margret Chale, the headteacher of Hola Primary school in Tana River said: "I give my teachers rewards and incentives. Sometimes I even sambaza (send) them credit. We work as a team."

Ms Chale noted that absenteeism used to be a challenge in her school, which has an enrolment of 1,000 pupils and only 20 teachers, but the teamwork helped.

Teachers bet

She said her school had a mean score of 249 in the 2014 KCPE results. Ms Alice Korir, headteacher of Rotik Primary School said she simply talked to teachers and parents about performance and they worked as a team.

She said that as a result, the school's mean score rose from 192 to 285 in last year's KCPE.

Mr Solomon Musee, the headteacher at Kathukani Primary School in Kitui, said he introduced bets on which teachers would perform well.

Address us again, tutors now ask TSC

BY NATION CORRESPONDENT

Headteachers yesterday asked Teachers Service Commission bosses to attend their ongoing conference in Mombasa and explain why the agency has not implemented a court-awarded pay rise.

The headteachers on Tuesday heckled and booed TSC chairman Lydia Nzomo at the Kenya Primary Schools Heads Association meeting, forcing her to end her speech.

But yesterday, teachers who spoke to the Nation said they expected the TSC officials to honour their promises by responding to the salary increase query they had presented on Tuesday.

Communication

"They should still have come to restore our lost glory. What they have done clearly indicates that they do not have teachers' interest at heart," said Malel Mosoriot Primary School headteacher Lawrence Korir.

He said the dispute between the commission and teachers is not grave and the commission's officials should negotiate with them in order to end the dispute.

"What we wanted from them is just communication. Everything else can be done by a simple structured communication," he added. On Tuesday, Dr Nzomo was booed by angry teachers for failing to implement their pay rise.

Catholics soften stand on vaccine

Findings assure safety of polio vaccination drive, says Catholic health commission head

BY EUNICE KILONZO

Ekilonzo@ke.nationmedia.com

A Catholic bishop has welcomed the release of the polio vaccine test result as "positive" and an assurance of the safety of the immunisation drive.

Embu Bishop Paul Kariuki Njiru, who heads the church's Health Commission, yesterday said the results, which were released on Tuesday, should have come out early to avert confusion.

The statement could help to clear up the controversy that has dogged the national campaign since it began on Monday.

However, his views contradict those of Dr Stephen Karanja, the chairman of the Catholic Doctors Association.

Dr Karanja shared with the Nation a report of a test he said was conducted in April on the vaccine.

The samples used for the test, according to the report, were from his private clinic.

On Tuesday, the National Quality Control Laboratory at the University of Nairobi said the vaccine is safe.

That was after the Catholic Church raised concern over the safety of the vaccine and asked the Ministry of Health to check for any contaminants as was done to the tetanus vaccine administered last year.

The church wanted the vaccine to be examined for the presence of three hormones, which are oestrogen compounds.

"It is regrettable that we have split and confused the public over this matter," Bishop Kariuki told the Nation by phone yesterday. "It shouldn't happen again in the future."

By Tuesday nearly four million children, against a target of six million in 32 counties, were vaccinated against polio, according to the ministry.

The counties were selected after an analysis of those most at risk of polio and those with mobile populations.

The bishop said they had not studied the ministry's findings but asked the government to not only publish them for the church but also the public.

"We have faith in our system. Therefore, let the results be available to everyone so that if there are questions from any other party, they can be addressed. We do not have personal

CJ dismisses calls for his expulsion

BY NATION REPORTER

Chief Justice Willy Mutunga has dismissed Mombasa lawyers petitioning for his removal, saying they are divisive and out of touch with the law.

The lawyers, through LSK Mombasa branch chairman Eric Nyongesa, have started collecting signatures and accuse Justice Mutunga of ruining the Judiciary.

The lawyers also criticised the establishment of new High Court stations across the country, saying some areas did not deserve them. They also claimed that experienced judges posted to remote areas will be "idle".

Scandal

"You do not open up marginalised areas in a haphazard manner. The CJ is engaging in populism," said Mr Nyongesa.

But speaking in Mombasa after opening this year's Judges Colloquium, Justice Mutunga said the Constitution and the JSC Act requires the expansion of justice to all parts of the country and the same is vital in decentralising services to the public.

"It is a scandal of historic proportions that segments of this society, in this time and age, can publicly refer to other Kenyans or region as unimportant," said Dr Mutunga.

TSC wants teachers to withdraw case

BY NATION REPORTER

The Teachers Service Commission (TSC) wants a teachers' union to withdraw its case against the agency before any talks on a new medical scheme can start.

TSC Chief Executive Nancy Macharia told National Hospital Insurance Fund (NHIF) boss Simon Ole Kirgotty in a letter dated July 28 that the commission has a case in court with the Kenya Union of Post Primary Education Teachers (Kuppet).

"Currently, we have a court matter filed by Kuppet and the commission has been restrained from deducting the medical allowances of all Kuppet members," said Mrs Macharia in the letter.

'Inferior' deal

She went on: "For the commission to enter into any engagement ... then Kuppet must agree to withdraw the pending court matter to pave way for negotiations."

Her letter was in response to a letter written by the NHIF to the TSC on July 23 to seek the commission's approval of a scheme for post-primary teachers.

The NHIF has entered into an agreement with Kuppet to manage for them a new medical scheme after opting out of a Sh6 billion plan implemented by the TSC and Aon Kenya Insurance Brokers.

Kuppet opted out of the TSC-AON scheme, calling it inferior, and later moved to court to challenge its implementation, a plea that was granted.

Under the new scheme, Kuppet members will lose half of their medical allowance, but still enjoy the same services as those provided by Aon.

Cord lawyers to fight 'bad laws'

Opposition claims Jubilee is sneaking in draconian laws amid concerns over runaway corruption

BY ISAAC ONGIRI

@ongiri2
iongiri@ke.nationmedia.com

Cord has set up a legal team comprising seven lawyers to analyse four pieces of legislation that they claim the Jubilee administration wants to use to dilute the Constitution.

Yesterday, the lawyers got down to work in Nairobi. They were identifying legal loopholes, which they want to use to poke holes in the "bad laws" that include the proposed Kenya Defence Forces Act of 2015.

Their proposals will be presented before a plenary of MPs and partner parties' national executive committees in Naivasha in two weeks.

The coalition alleges President Uhuru Kenyatta has found a way of mutilating the Constitution by sponsoring the enactment of dubious laws to entrench more authority around the Presidency through the back door.

Further, the Cord leadership feels the Jubilee administration is coming up with suspicious legislation to introduce authoritarian rule. This, the coalition claimed, would continue perpetuating runaway corruption and scuttle the rule of law.

Siaya Senator James Orengo is reported to be leading the legal team.

According to the head of the Cord Secretariat, Norman Magaya, other members of the team include Paul Mwangi, Anthony Oluoch, Haroun Ndubi, Celistine Anyango, Edwin Sifuna and himself.

"We are trying to identify constitutional issues. We plan to move to court over some proposed laws and Acts, as well as the ones that have already been enacted," said Mr Magaya.

He said the coalition would be in court in a fortnight to fight for Kenyans whose rights they say are being limited by the draconian laws being passed by the Jubilee-leaning National Assembly.

Some of the laws on the Opposition's radar are the Public Audit Bill of 2014, the Retirement Benefits Bill of 2013 and one on the National Youth Service.

"The direction taken by the government is worrying. We know we can only get recourse in the courts and not in the National Assembly," said Mr Magaya.

"It is important that we respect independent offices including that of the Auditor-General. We would fight to ensure individuals planning to destroy the independence of this office do not succeed," said Kajiado Senator Peter ole Mositet.

He urged Jubilee to be cautious, saying a stable audit office is needed to fight corruption.

GRAFT | Shollei to plead to charges on August 24 as she is currently out of the country

Ex-officials charged over Sh300m CJ house

The former Judiciary bosses have denied irregularly procuring the official residence for the Chief Justice

@PaulOgemba
pogemba@ke.nationmedia.com

Former Judiciary chief registrar Gladys Shollei missed her day in court as her co-accused were charged with illegally procuring an official residence for the Chief Justice.

The grand house in Runda, valued at Sh310 million, was the subject of a bitter falling-out between Mrs Shollei, Chief Justice Willy Mutunga and the Judicial Service Commission, leading to her sacking in October 2013.

Her lawyer, Mr Paul Ng'arua, informed chief magistrate Kennedy Bidali that Mrs Shollei was out of the country and had written to the Judiciary requesting that she be allowed time to return before pleading to the charges.

"Mrs Shollei left the country on July 27 and was not aware she will be required in court to take a plea. She will be back on August 20 and will present herself when required," said Mr Ng'arua.

Mr Bidali, who also doubles as the Judiciary ombudsman, allowed the request and deferred her pleading to the charges to August 24.

Mrs Shollei was to face three counts of abuse of office, wilful failure to comply with laws governing management of public funds and engaging in a project without proper planning.

"Between April 16 and 30 being the chief registrar and accounting officer of the Judiciary, you used your office to improperly confer a benefit to Johnson Nduya Muthama Ltd by approving payment of Sh310 million for the purchase of a residence for the Chief Justice," read the charge sheet.

The company alleged to have received the money from Mrs Shollei is associated with Machakos Senator Johnson Muthama.

In the second count, the former chief registrar was alleged to have failed to ensure that purchase of the residence was done in a manner that was effective, efficient, economical and transparent.

Those charged were Mrs Shollei's former deputy Francis Kakai Kissinger, former supply management director Martin Okwata, former ICT director Tom Atak, former finance director Benedict Omollo, former director of revenue Wycliffe Wanga and Nicholas Mbeba, a member of the tender committee.

The six served as members of the Judicial Tender Committee and were accused of approving the purchase of the house without proper planning.

"Being members of the tender committee, you wilfully failed to comply with the law by rejecting the submissions of the evaluation committee to award the tender for purchase of the Chief Justice residence to the tenderer with the lowest evaluated price without any justification," read the charge.

Bail, in shillings, the former Judiciary officials were released on each, with the case scheduled for mention on August 24 to fix a hearing date

They were further accused of failing to ensure that the Judiciary did not pay in excess of the prevailing market prices in the purchase of the fully furnished residential property from Johnson Nduya Muthama Holdings Ltd for the sum of Sh310 million.

They all denied the charges and were released on a cash bail of Sh600,000 each, with the case scheduled for mention on August 24 to fix a hearing date.

The charges were a culmination of nearly two years of investigations by the Ethics and Anti-Corruption Commission since Dr Mutunga forwarded them the file alleging misappropriation of public funds at the Judiciary.

The Judicial Service Commission had relieved the former registrar of her duties over allegations of financial mismanagement, misbehaviour, insubordination, mismanagement in human resource, irregularities and improprieties in procurement.

Sonko sues Transport CS over Thika Road bumps

BY NATION REPORTER

Nairobi Senator Mike Sonko (right) has asked a court to order the removal of road bumps and rumble strips on the Thika superhighway, saying they are causing unnecessary gridlocks.

His request that the court visit the Survey of Kenya and Homeland/Kenya Breweries area on the highway for "impact assessment" was allowed but the presiding judge did not set a date.

In the suit, certified as urgent at the High Court, Mr Sonko is seeking an order compelling the Transport Cabinet secretary and the city county government to remove the bumps and rumble strips.

"In executing the prayer as sought, it is desirable that the court designate a point to assess traffic flow at least 300 metres before the said bumps on either side of the Thika Superhighway and at the bumps, and at least 300 metres after the said bumps," said Mr Sonko's lawyer, Mr Harrison Kinyanjui.

He said the court needs to assess the impact of traffic jams caused by the "respondents' inaction" at the two points on the highway and that they ensure that pedestrians use the footbridge.

"The congestion cannot be demonstrated on paper by affidavit evidence, neither can photographic evidence fully capture the extent of damage and losses occasioned by the respondents' inaction," the senator's affidavit reads.

CRUNCH TIME | Legislators may seek extension of deadline

House faces crisis of delayed key Bills

Lawmakers have less than 20 days to pass laws as required by the Constitution

BY JEREMIAH KIPLANG'AT

MPs and senators could lose their seats for failing to meet the deadline for passing critical constitutional Bills that are to be adopted by August 27. The lawmakers have less than 20 days remaining and are now racing against time to meet the deadline for the proposed laws that must be passed as demanded by various sections of the Constitution.

Although the Bills must be initiated in the National Assembly, senators' approval would have to be sought before they are passed.

If they do not pass them by the date, then any citizen can move to the High Court seeking their removal from office.

Among the Bills required for passage are the Community Land Bill, the Agreements on Natural Resources Bill, the National Culture Bill and the Minimum and Maximum Holding Land Acreage Bill.

Other Bills that must be developed and passed are those touching on the two-thirds gender rule, family and marginalised groups.

This is the last batch of Bills recommended by the supreme law that was adopted through a popular vote in 2010 and will fulfil Articles 11, 45, 63, 66, 71, 81 and 100 of the Constitution.

Most of the proposed laws are yet to be published while some have stagnated in the House. Some, including the one on the gender rule and the representation of marginalised groups, are facing opposition from various quarters.

Members of the National Assembly's Constitutional Implementation Oversight Committee (CIOC) have expressed their concerns, saying they may not raise the numbers required to extend the deadline like they did last year.

For any extension to happen, they must get the support of two-thirds of the 349 members, a task they said would be difficult to achieve. The Constitution allows them a one-year extension.

The MPs are already training their anger on Attorney-General Githu Muigai, whom they blame for the failure to observe the timeline.

Nakuru Town East MP David Gikaria (TNA) said they would not sit and wait to be sent home yet they are not to blame.

"The AG cannot run away from responsibility. If we fail to get the numbers to extend the deadline then we can lose our seats yet we are not to blame. The President needs to crack the whip on the AG or we will bring a petition to remove him," said the MP, a member of CIOC.

Committee chairman Njoroge Baiya, however, said lawmakers might seek an extension of the deadline to enable the two Houses to agree on the Bills.

"We will attempt to burn the midnight oil to pass the Bills but if it is not possible we will ask for more time," Mr Baiya said.

Police service needs
a complete overhaul

The Kenya Police Service has been badly exposed over the Pastor Lenny Ng'ang'a fatal car crash affair. If a critical measure of civilisation is integrity of the organs mandated to ensure justice, law, and order, it has been demonstrated again why Kenya ranks so low on that scale.

It is sad that it took pressure from citizens for the police to launch an internal inquiry and establish the level of fraud and cover-up, especially after Inspector-General of Police Joseph Boinnet initially sent out a false report.

Ensuring that the right person is punished will go some way towards ensuring justice for Ms Mercy Njeri, who died in the car crash. However, that will not be enough. A ruthless purge is the only way to rescue the tainted image of the Police Service.

It must be demonstrated that the service will not condone within its ranks corruption, miscarriage of justice, interference with investigations, witness and evidence tampering, and other activities that bring it into disrepute. This is not just about a single incident, but about an expose on the culture of criminal tendencies that permeate the entire service.

For too long now, successive police commanders have resisted the level of shake-up vital towards a reformed service that will abandon the old ways of sloth and graft and live up the motto of Utumishi Kwa Wote. It was to the credit of Mr Boinnet that he swiftly reversed himself and ordered an investigation after the embarrassment of being misled by his own officers.

To ensure that it does not happen again, the Inspector-General, who is still rather new in office, must now personally lead the crusade against criminal elements in the organisation.

This is not a job for the faint-hearted.

Harmonise these laws

The controversy over the admission of students to the Kenya Medical Training colleges should not have arisen if the various government departments consulted one another and acted in concert. At the heart of the matter is the dispute over who should admit students to the medical colleges. On one hand, the Kenya Universities and Colleges Central Placement Service selected and placed students to the medical colleges, in line with the Universities Act. Similarly, the medical colleges board admitted students in line with its own Act.

What emerges here is duplication of roles and lack of harmony among various pieces of legislation. The Universities Act, 2012, envisaged a scenario where the government would centralise admission for all public universities and middle-level colleges to create order and guarantee merit, fairness, and equity. However, it seems the framers of the Act did not examine all the legislations on higher education and training and hence enacted a law that duplicated what other institutions did.

The two agencies need to meet and thrash out their differences so that qualified students can be admitted to learn. Subsequently, the Attorney General should harmonise the laws to avoid confusion.

Africa after Obama: Sins of ancestors and neighbours don't have to be ours

This is the week when, probably, "Obama-nia" will wear off and we go back fully to our old lives. A week after US President Barack Obama left East Africa, he might finally understand what his Kenyan father, Barack Hussein Obama, had to contend with as a polygamist.

For whenever President Obama visits, partly because he has African blood in him, there are countries that feel left out, thus setting off sour-graping and sniping.

Compared to previous Africa trips, Mr Obama seems to have learnt his Africa a little better. For example, he avoided pointedly referring to his hosts by name in his criticisms — except when he came to Burundi. An African chief does not respond well when you speak too directly to his face.

He is a promising student of former president Mwai Kibaki, who was adept at saying things without saying them. But that was not enough to keep him out of trouble. Many voices on the continent still felt that he was patronising and double-faced, particularly when it came to the touchy matter of presidential term limits.

In his speech at the African Union, he weighed into the ever-growing list of African leaders who are turning themselves into presidents for life by scrapping term limits. There was therefore pushback, with criticism that Mr Obama had no moral authority to lecture African leaders on term limits or human rights because back in the US the police too are shooting blacks willy nilly, or that some of America's closest allies in other parts of the world — Israel, Germany, Britain — do not have term limits.

Then there are its Arab friends in the Middle East like Saudi Arabia, Qatar, and so on, who do not even have something comparable to an African village election or independent courts, yet America does not wag a finger at them the way he does with Africa's dictatorships.

Now, all these and other criticisms of America and the West's double standards are correct, but they are still unhelpful. To begin with, they are based on the very idea the critics are rejecting — that the West is the standard. It is not.

The world is diverse and all peoples and civilisations have something to offer, but it is also a natural thing for countries to think they are the best. Meet even the poorest African hopping about with jiggers in his feet, and — without any sense of irony — he will tell you proudly about how the continent's mineral wealth surpasses that of the rest of the world combined.

However, the most troubling bit is that some of us who rail against America, Europe, China, and everyone else seem not to see Africa as a place that can be the standard for the rest of the world.

If you are comfortable in your African accomplishments, you are unlikely to play the empty equivalence game of "you don't have term limits, so it's right that we don't have them too" or "you brutalise your minorities, so we are right to do the same to ours".

In this case, one would argue that let Africa make term limits work and have fair and honest elections, then lecture the rest of the world about it.

It is possible. Uganda was the first country to achieve the most dramatic drop in HIV/Aids and you could not turn a corner without running into a foreign researcher studying how it achieved it.

Kenya's Equity Bank cracked the problem of how to bank the "poor" in the MAINSTREAM (emphasis added), and not through some exploitative microfinance scheme in the bushes.

Safaricom taught the world how to do mobile money with its M-Pesa. If you find anyone who tells you he or she has read all the articles and watched all the lectures on M-Pesa on YouTube, then they are the biggest liars. There are just too many of them.

Rwanda achieved the biggest drop in infant mortality ever recorded by modern humans in their 250,000 years on Earth.

In the 1980s a famine killed nearly one million people in Ethiopia's northeastern Tigray region. Today people troop there to marvel at its abundance and see how irrigation and smart farming can turn around the fortunes of a people.

So, let us teach the Middle East how democracy is done, Europe about term limits, and show America's police force how not to be racist. Progress comes from bettering the best, not from equalling the worst guy.

INTEGRITY | Ndung'u Wainaina

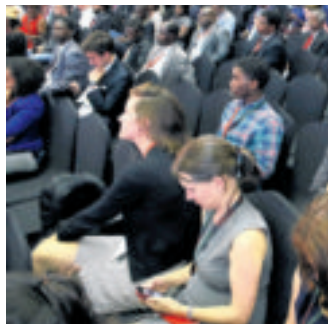

Let's be serious about fighting graft if we really want our country to develop

The latest report of the Kenya National Audit Office on the expenditure of government ministries and departments makes gloom reading. It shows that the reality on the ground is quite different from the government's pronouncements. The report dents the image and reputation of the country. This is sad, coming just a few days after our hosting of the Global Entrepreneurship Summit.

The report shows that corruption is widespread in Kenya's public service and political system, facilitated by weaknesses in the management of public resources and law enforcement.

Kenya is paying a high price for corruption. The single biggest enemy of entrepreneurship and doing business in Kenya is corruption. Graft has eroded the public's confidence in public institutions and undermined the economy. It has scared away investors, stifled economic growth, decreased investment and trade, and consequently costs young people jobs.

Corruption has destroyed the integrity and reputation of the country's financial, political, and economic systems. It has undermined the rule of law and the confidence of citizens in their national and county governments. It is facilitating human rights abuses and organised crime, empowering authoritarianism and creating an unaccountable political leadership. It is threatening democratic space, peace, security, and the country's stability.

Corruption has weakened law enforcement and the police and exposed the country to terrorism, transnational organised crime, and made the country a safe haven for international criminals.

Studies have linked corruption to increasing levels of poverty and income inequality. That is why it is vital to fight corruption. This war requires a new paradigm. Kenya needs a tough legal regime that will stamp out conflict of interest.

If we want to tackle both high level and petty corruption decisively, we must restore the public's trust in key criminal justice institutions such as the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions, the National Police Service, and the Criminal Investigation Department.

Civil servants are at the centre of plundering public funds. They should be prohibited from doing business with the government. The laws governing the fight on corruption, public officers' ethics, and public Service and public financial management should be amended to bar public officials from doing any business with the State.

What is at stake here is our country's economy, security, and democracy. We have a good Constitution, but it is disregarded with impunity. Public servants manipulate procurement and other procedures to unfairly benefit themselves, yet no action is taken against them.

The government must put in place a strict system of disclosure, verification, and enforcing compliance. Cracking down on the business interests of civil servants is not enough; this must go hand in hand with similar prohibitions on elected and nominated representatives.

Civil servants should be made to declare the business interests of their extended families so that cases of conflict of interest are eliminated. There must be mandatory auditing of the lifestyle of public officials.

Kenya must fix its civil service if it wants to prosper. It must take measures to stamp out corruption among public servants and the Public Service Commission must take stern measures to tackle increasing cases of financial misconduct among public officials. The culture of impunity where wrongdoers know that they will not face punishment for their crimes must stop.

The government of Kenya should seize the agreement with the United States to increase the momentum and tighten the war on corruption by denying safe havens to corrupt officials and their illicit assets. The ethics and integrity laws governing public officials should be strictly enforced.

The government must rigorously pursue corrupt actors and their ill-gotten wealth. It must robustly promote open government principles and improve transparency in transactions and trade deals. There should be no sacred cows. It must forge a new path in running the public service. New rules must be set and enforced vigorously and consistently.

THE CUTTING EDGE

BY THE WATCHMAN

NATIONAL DISASTER. Corruption should be declared a national disaster, urges Geoffrey Ngeno, alarmed at the widespread reports of looting of public coffers, wanton waste and the rampant and blatant mismanagement of resources. President Kenyatta, Geoffrey pleads, should not let the country hit rock bottom as has happened in Greece and Zimbabwe "to appreciate the enormity of the problem". He adds: "Already, youth are feeling the pinch in the scarcity of jobs!" His contact is isjeffkip254@gmail.com.

PRIDE OF AFRICA. Kenya Airways is on its knees and the politicians must stop flogging what is already down, says Taabu Tele. However, he adds, the government "must do whatever it takes to save the 'Pride of Africa' whose going under would fatally undermine the bid for the long overdue direct flights to the US". A forensic audit, he adds, must follow, "with thorough restructuring to make KQ operations sustainable to compete effectively in the global aviation market". But, according to him, "we must not let our national heritage collapse". His contact is smajo81@gmail.com.

EXPENSIVE TICKETS. The national carrier's woes could be partly self-inflicted, remarks Ken Ogare, laying blame on the airline's pricing policy. While agreeing that KQ is a Kenyan brand that should not be allowed to go down in the wake of its record-breaking loss, Ken says it would be advisable for the airline to review its charges. A return ticket to South Africa, he claims, costs Sh80,000 on KQ and Sh60,000 is what its rival in East Africa charges. "Inasmuch as I would like to be patriotic, I would fly the rival to save some money." His contact is k_ogare@yahoo.com.

Electricity House in Nairobi, Kenya Power's head office.

LONG-LASTING. When Kenya Power started promoting the use of energy-saving bulbs, George Mburu says he was one of the lucky beneficiaries, as he handed in his old bulbs for replacement at no fee. Eight years later, he adds, the energy savers are still serving him well, but the bulbs he bought later, of the same Osram brand, lasted only three years. "Can Kenya Power assist customers to get those original bulbs or open a distribution centre?" His contact is maicibugm@gmail.com.

CONFLICTING CHARGES. A resident of Zebra-Utawala in Nairobi, Josiah Adiema, applied for electricity two years ago and to date, there is no light at the end of the tunnel. It all began on a sour note when he was slapped with a quotation of Sh229,000 and his efforts to get it reviewed have yielded nothing despite making five requests. But a few days ago, he was told to pay Sh80,000, though there is a presidential directive to lower the cost to Sh15,000. "Who will resolve this?" asks Josiah, whose application reference is E21132014010939 and his contact, Tel+254724267087.

THIS IS UNFAIR. The campaign to have Safaricom split over alleged market dominance is unfair, says Laura Gakuru, adding that over the years, she has made four attempts to defect to other mobile service providers, but always returned. She always beats a hasty retreat, she explains, after finding the rivals' data and voice quality, customer support, service levels, "and system capabilities" wanting. "It is not Safaricom's fault that my friends and I are staying put, though the other service providers may have improved." Her contact is lauragakuru@yahoo.com.

EDUCATION | Vincent Owondo

Mocks are not the villain in school unrest

Banning mock examinations in schools is like treating the symptoms of a disease without bothering to deal with the root cause of the problem. It appears the pillars of our admirable quality of education are being systematically eliminated. It started with the shambolic Form One selections and the abolishing of ranking of schools in national examinations.

The second term is just ending and all candidates should have sat for their mock examinations. The examinations are co-ordinated at county level, although some schools make them an internal matter. These examinations serve three very important functions.

First, they help the teachers to gauge the level of preparedness of the candidates for the final examination. While many schools will have completed the syllabus and can give comprehensive examinations, some schools, due to either poor planning on the part of the school or the students, have, for example, hardly completed the Form Three syllabus.

This is what is prompting unrest in some schools. Nobody likes examinations and it is even worse when an examination exposes one negatively against one's competitors. Is it any wonder that most strikes in schools over frivolous reasons or mysterious dormitory fires are rampant during this term?

Is it any wonder that most strikes in schools over frivolous reasons or mysterious dormitory fires are rampant during this term?”

Second, the results of mock examinations help teachers to predict the performance of students in the final examinations. They provide useful information to examination boards should anything happen to the candidate to cause incapacitation before or during the examination. International examination boards take this exercise very seriously and trust teachers' judgement to award grades to candidates in such circumstances. Performance in the mock examination is the only reliable source of information. It is surprising that the Kenya National Examinations Council (Kneec) has disowned mock examinations. What does it propose to do with such students?

Universities have admitted students based on their performance in mock examinations as they wait for the release of the results of the final exam. This is because it is accepted that mock examination grades reflect a student's potential. Mock examinations are organised to cover regions, not just individual schools, to make them competitive and to reflect the realistic performance of students.

Third, and most important, mocks are used to train candidates on the rules of examination administration. Unfortunately, many schools handle this exercise so casually that some candidates are taken by surprise by the stringent rules of national examinations. Cheating in examinations is nurtured by the casual way some schools administer regular tests in the classroom, with some teachers not enforcing strict regulations. A strictly administered mock examination takes care of this. Kneec should appreciate this as it makes its work easier.

Many schools administer credible mock examinations and their students look forward to the assessment. They regard their grades in the mocks as a wake-up call for the amount of work they need to do to prepare for their final examinations. Such students are happy to take mock exams that cover their region. Such schools should be commended.

Adults should listen to what students say

No one has stopped to think about the message that students rioting in schools and destroying dormitories are trying to say. The relationship between a student and a teacher should resemble that of a parent and their child. School heads should embrace dialogue with students through open forums where students are given the opportunity to freely air their views about what affects them. This way, students will communicate in the right way instead of using negative means to be heard.

EUPHRAZIER OGOT, via email

Unrest in schools is caused by indiscipline

When children are young, they have good discipline. They respect their elders and even their agetates. But things have changed and students are now criminals, burning their colleagues alive in dormitories. The attempt to justify this by saying that it is because the students are afraid of mock exams is just an excuse. A well-brought up and disciplined child will not do such things because he knows right and wrong. Discipline was better when corporal punishment was allowed.

RUTH CHEGE, Gilgil

Change curriculum to cut pressure on pupils

The Ministry of Education should come up with new structures to end unrest in schools. First, the current curriculum is overwhelming, with frequent exams that put students under a lot of pressure. I think there should only be end-of-term and end-of-year exams. This way, students will have enough time to rest and refresh their minds.

End this chaos before more damage is done

I don't think the unrest in schools is due to pressure of mock examinations. I believe that the parents and the Ministry of Education are to blame for the children are indisciplined and school are poorly run. The question is, how can we stop this madness before more lives are lost?

BENARD Imbeywa, Ngara

TALKING POINT

We should understand our students in order to handle them in better way

The recent surge of cases of indiscipline among students is worrying. Times have changed and the current crop of students need to be handled differently. The days when the teacher's word was final and unquestionable are long gone. The exposure that the current learners have gives them skills to question everything. They do not obey without questioning and know when their rights are violated. This is a reality that modern school managers need to embrace.

Positive behaviour management is imperative. Teachers need to understand their learners, treat them as friends, and try to understand the causes underlying their behaviour before condemning them as "bad". Challenges facing learners of this age are myriad. They will not stop to think. Instead, they project their anger through destruction of property, verbal outbursts, and withdrawal.

Behaviour management skills should be an integral part of teacher development programmes. This needs to be enhanced to boost a healthy rapport between the learners and the teachers. Students need to understand why they are being punished, the consequences, and a clearance talk after the punishment. This way, holding of grudges, lightly referred as "beef", can be resolved.

Teachers need to use the right strategies for behaviour management and even involve external agencies such as education psychologists to address underlying conditions. Educators need to work together to come up with behaviour support plans for students with challenges and use the strategies consistently to effect behaviour change.

While every child is his/her parent's darling, this should not be an excuse to condone negative behaviour. Parents should never support their children's bad behaviour. A composed but firm tone should teach the student that there are boundaries that should not be crossed. Give them a chance to express themselves and reason with them.

Learners need to understand

Awasi Secondary School students rummage through debris after a fire burnt down the office of the school's principal, destroying documents and receipts.

that the school administration and the teachers are there to help, that violence is not a solution to life's challenges.

However, all is not lost and the road to success is always under construction.

GEORGE MATHENGE, principal, Brookhurst International School

It has become a trend that unrest in secondary schools happens around June and July and spreads like wildfire throughout the country. So, who is to blame for this destructive behaviour?

As we castigate the students involved in the arson horror, we should also reflect on the rot in our society. Morality is wanting, with everybody taking their complaints to the streets instead of using the right channels.

Teachers complaining about poor pay are nowadays a common spectacle on the streets, carrying placards and shouting and involving themselves in altercations with the police. What do their students think when they watch them on TV?

The Kenya National Union of Teachers has threatened a strike in September if the government fails to honour the court's pay award.

They will likely burn an effigy of their perceived enemies. Are they aware that students will copy them, most likely burning their dormitories, libraries, or the laboratories?

Parents have also neglected their role of guiding their children. Children are not punished for their mistakes. Instead, they are coddled. Parents are ready to oppose anyone who attempts to correct their children. The responsibility that the whole society had in disciplining children no longer exists.

Our political leaders have little to offer our children in terms of discipline because they are constantly involved in war mongering, witchhunting, and incitement. Our leaders are always complaining and whining. They organise demonstrations and sometimes destroy property, as was the case during the recent crackdown on illicit drinks.

It is high time society thought about the example it is setting for our children. Children emulate what they see adults do, whether it is wrong or right. The society is a mirror to children, so it should strive to reflect good images if we expect to bring up children who will grow up to become strong, upright, and responsible adults.

KAMWERU JAMES, Nairobi

SHORT TAKES

Emails from correspondents

FOSTER CARE: The Child Welfare Society of Kenya board has not met to review prospective parents' adoption applications since January 2015. There are many interested parents who would like to provide homes to the children in the many children's homes in Kenya. The board is tasked to review and approve adoption and foster care applications. Their inability to sit delays children from moving in with families. Can someone please sort out this problem so that applications are reviewed and approved as they come to avoid delays?

PROSPECTIVE PARENT, Nairobi

CLASSIFY HOTELS: Classification of hospitality facilities is important. When hotels and lodges are classified, they enjoy customer confidence as this is considered to be a mark of quality. The announcement that the government was going to start classifying hotels, lodges, beach resorts and restaurants was received with joy by players in the industry, who saw this as an opportunity to raise the profiles of their facilities. However, this has delayed and dampening the hopes. We have waited for too long.

BENARD AMAYA, via email

THE WRONG REASONS: Since Burundi President Pierre Nkurunziza declared his interest to vie for a third term, the country has been hitting the headlines for all the wrong reasons. He ignored calls for dialogue to resolve the political crisis and conducted sham elections. It seems democracy in Burundi has gone to the dogs. The international community should not watch as Burundi plunges into political and economic turmoil. The Burundi leader should heed US President Barack Obama's advice on clinging to power.

JOSEPH G. MUTHAMA, Thika

NO SURPRISE AT ALL: The recent sentiments by the Chief Justice that he believes that corruption is rampant in the Judiciary should not come as a surprise. The Judiciary has in the past five years been one of the highest funded institutions. As Dr Willy Mutunga confirmed, Judiciary staff enjoy big salaries and allowances. He fails to understand why some of those individuals have not stopped asking for bribes to manipulate justice. The bosses at the Judiciary fail to understand that poverty is not the driver to stealing or corruption. Having more money does not kill the desire for more.

WILSON KIRIMA, Murang'a

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION

Is the government doing enough to stem the outbreak of fires and strikes in schools?

KELVIN KIHARA: The government should ensure that there are proper safety measures in case of a fire outbreak. To stem strikes, school management should make sure that students' needs are met. Students should learn to survive on what their school offers.

ABASS AHMED: No. Some schools

don't have fire extinguishers or water hoses to curb fire tragedy. Also some dormitories do not meet the proper specifications. Students who start fires should be dealt with firmly.

NANCY NDICHU: If there is a field the government has scored 0, then it is disaster management in schools. It needs to do better here to ensure the safety of the children.

RUTH GITUMA: This madness of school fires had momentarily ceased but more needs to be done on the dormitory designs. The Ministry of Education inspectors should check these buildings.

OBED NYAMBEGA: No, the government has not and is still not doing enough to stem school fires.

CHARLES NZIOKA: No. Strict measures should be taken to stop strikes and fires. The ministry should punish those involved and sack lazy headteachers.

Alarm over city housing project on wetland

@wachiramuchemi
mwachira@ke.nationmedia.com

A private developer who was recently stopped from putting up 10 apartments on wetland in Nairobi five years ago has resumed construction.

The title deed for the land was revoked in a gazette notice of April 1, 2010, and the property, which is located at Kibarage Valley along Lower Kabete Road, declared public land.

In March, suspended Cabinet Secretary Charity Ngilu warned the developer of Alina Villas against continuing with the construction.

Mrs Ngilu had been alerted by environmentalists and neighbours that the tycoon said to have interests in the banking industry had ignored an earlier directive to stop developing the property.

The property was declared public following protests by environmentalists.

Nobel laureate Wangari Maathai started the protests in 2009 when she led a group of activists to the site and asked the government to revoke the title deed of the property.

The residential building being put up at Kibagare Valley in Nairobi's Lower Kabete. The housing project has been opposed by conservationists who say the area is a wetland.

Following the protests that got the backing of then Lands Minister James Orengo, the developer abandoned the construction work.

He had started putting up the buildings in 2007 when the local community raised alarm.

Mr Orengo took up the matter, which led to the revocation of the title deed for the land.

Contacted yesterday on whether the developer has a title deed for the plot, National Lands Commission chairman Muhammad Swazuri did not respond to the text message or answer calls.

But National Environment Management Authority confirmed that it had allowed the developer to put up the buildings before ordering him to stop.

"We have issued them (the developers) with a stop order, halting any activities at the site but (the developer) has now taken Nema to National Environment Tribunal contesting the authority's decision," Nema acting chief corporate communication manager Anthony Ngare told Nation by telephone yesterday.

The tribunal has the powers of a court, which means Nema cannot interfere with the ongoing construction until the case is heard and determined.

The apartments are being erected on the riparian land of Mathare River,

The developer has however displayed a plaque showing the construction has been approved by the relevant authorities.

Governors told to rein in MCAs in border row

Taita-Taveta ward reps and residents 'invade' Kwale and lay claim to land

Kwale Governor Salim Mvurya and his Taita-Taveta counterpart John Mruttu have been asked to defuse tension among their counties arising from a boundary dispute.

National Cohesion and Integration Commission Chairman Francis Ole Kaparo yesterday appealed to the governors to rein in their county assembly members prevail on them not to take the law into their hands.

On Monday, Taita-Taveta County Assembly Speaker Meshack Maghanga and Marungu Ward Representative Paul Waweru were arrested at Landi ya Mwembeni near Taru trading centre in Kwale after they led other MCAs and residents in erecting a signpost claiming Boundaries 'can not be changed'

Cohesion team boss Francis Ole Kaparo has said boundaries of 27 counties that are seeking to expand their territories will not be adjusted.

"There is misconception that boundaries can be changed. The boundaries are based on the Districts and Provinces Act of 1992. The disputes are exaggerated," said Mr Kaparo.

the area. The two were released on police bail of Sh10,000 each after being held for more than five hours.

"Based on experiences elsewhere, such situations can get out of hand and result in fatalities. The commission is appealing to both of you to do everything possible to de-escalate the tension while exploring the possibility of solving the dispute amicably," said Mr Kaparo in a letter to the governors.

Mr Kaparo, however, praised

NCIC boss Francis Ole Kaparo

Mr Mvurya and Mr Mruttu for making efforts to ensure some of the inciters are brought to book.

"In the meantime, the commission will, in consultation with county commissioners, organise a public baraza on Monday, August 10 to exhort residents to keep the peace," he said in the letter.

Last week, Governor Mvurya asked county commissioners from both sides to beef up security at Mackinon Road, where he alleged Taita-Taveta MCAs planned to erect a billboard.

On his side, Governor Mruttu urged his county's residents and leaders to be patient while a lasting solution to the dispute was found.

Mr Mruttu said the county government is gathering information on the boundary.

"The report will be ready in two weeks and we will then discuss the way forward," he said.

Taita-Taveta is also involved in boundary rows with Kajiado County at Rombo and with Makueni County at Mtito Andei.

Meanwhile, Taita-Taveta Deputy Majority Leader Hope Anisa said the county would withdraw from the Jumuiya ya Kaunti za Pwani economic bloc if the boundary dispute is not resolved in the county's favour.

Ms Anisa accused Kwale's Mr Mvurya, who is the bloc's chairman, of "playing games with the residents of Taita-Taveta County."

"He claims that the boundary disputed cannot be solved through the Jumuiya ya Kaunti za Pwani forum. If this union cannot solve such disputes then there is no need for us to continue being in it," she said.

Executive, assembly close to deal ending budget standoff

The executive and county assembly are close to reaching a deal on a budget dispute. County Assembly Speaker Kaberia Arimba (left) said yesterday he was optimistic the stalemate would be resolved by the end of the week. He said the two sides met on Monday and Tuesday and were close to a deal that will see the Appropriation Bill assented to. "We will have to compromise on a few things to reach an agreement," he said. Mr Arimba said the standoff had affected the county assembly's operations and ward representatives and staff had not been paid their July salaries. "We are supposed to be on recess but for the sake of residents, we have decided to conclude this matter," he said. Last month, Governor Peter Munya refused to assent to the Bill, saying more funds should be allocated to development.

Boycott rally, ODM official tells Rasanga amid audit queries

Governor Cornel Rasanga has been told to boycott a public rally meant to grill him over alleged misappropriation of funds. Former Alego Usonga MP Sammy Weyia and some residents have invited the governor to a rally dubbed Okoa Siaya Nane Nane on Saturday at Ahindi Gardens. But speaking in Siaya Town, the county ODM chairman George Okanda, advised Governor Rasanga not to attend the rally, arguing that the organisers had no capacity to summon him over the recently released Auditor-General's report. He accused the organisers of using their personal differences with the governor to derail the management of the county.

Pass Bill allowing guards to carry guns, Parliament urged Parliament has been urged to hasten the passage of a Bill to allow private security guards to carry guns. Mr Richard Tuta, a security analyst, called for a speedy enactment of the Private Security Regulation Bill 2014. "Watchmen are like flower girls or ushers yet they are doing a job where criminals and thieves are well armed," he said. The guards are prone to attack as they are the first targets of armed criminals, he said, citing the Westgate mall siege in 2013 and the Garissa university attack in April. The guards at the two places could have at least tried to fight off the terrorists if they were armed, he argued.

Police are looking for some students of Nyabieyo Mixed Secondary School in Kisii who attempted to torch a parent's house after receiving news of their teacher's death.

Mr Samuel Ombati, who is a parent at the school, had earlier led a protest against the deceased, Mr Evans Oimeke, who had been accused of sexually molesting students.

The principal, Mr Philip Olela, said the students had stormed Mr Ombati's house with an intention of burning it.

"The parent led a protest against the dead teacher over alleged sex scandals. It was assumed that he was against the teacher being at the school.

Mr Olela said the school has been closed down until further notice.

Kisii South police boss David Mburukue said about 20 students from the school pelted the house with stones and wanted to set it on fire when they got word that their teacher had died in a motorbike accident.

He said in a fit of rage, the students walked out of the school compound and threw bottles containing petrol on the roof of the house while chanting war songs, but their arson mission failed.

Mr Mburukue said police are yet to establish the students' motive but said he was aware of the bad blood between Mr Ombati and one of the teachers.

The police boss said the deceased was seen leaving a bar in Suneka and heading to Riana on his bike and it is suspected that he was involved in an accident on the night before his death.

"Well wishers found him bleeding profusely on Monday morning around 4am and took him to Kisii Teaching and Referral Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

"Early last month, parents marched to the school compound demanding the dismissal of Mr Oimeke," said Mr Mburukue.

BY ANGELA OKETCH

Two children have died after eating rice suspected to have been poisoned.

The children were part of a family of nine that ate the rice on Tuesday. The other seven are in critical condition.

The first child died on Tuesday while the second, Dickens Omondi, 11, died yesterday at home.

Ms Beatrice Auma, the mother of the two children, said the food was prepared at a neighbour's home during a funeral.

"We ate the rice in the morning and soon after, the children complained of stomach pains," she said.

"One of the boys was taken to the hospital where he died.

Dickens was found dead in the house yesterday, foaming in the mouth," she said.

A neighbour, Ms Gladys Wandiega, and her three children who also ate the rice, are in critical condition at Kisumu County Hospital.

The children's grandparents, who were ate the rice in the morning, are fighting for their lives.

Nairobi | Report exposes rot in health centres

Lack of staff, drugs plague city hospitals

House team says health centres can't adequately serve residents

BY LILLIAN MUTAVI
lmutavi@ke.nationmedia.com

Most hospitals in Nairobi are poorly managed, understaffed and perennially lack essential drugs, says a county assembly committee report.

The report by the County Assembly Sectorial Committee on Health Services says the hospitals cannot adequately serve city residents if the issue is not addressed by City Hall.

Members of the Manoah Mboku-led committee visited Umoja 1 and Jericho health centres in their fact-finding mission on the state of health services in the county.

The committee reported lack of drugs in the health centres, with patients resorting to buying medicine from private hospitals.

The committee has recommended that the county health department tackle the issue of lack of drugs in city hospitals urgently as very few people can afford medicines.

Drugs in public hospitals are provided by the Kenya Medical Supplies Agency (Kemsco).

According to the report, the last time Kemsco supplied drugs to the two health centres was in August last year.

"The issue of drug supplies to the facilities must be resolved immediately and future supplies to all other county health facilities be processed and delivered on time," said Mr Mboku when he presented the report before the assembly.

At the same time, the committee chairman said they were shocked at the scarcity of staff at the two hospitals. He said the health centres have no medical doctor.

At the Jericho Health Centre, which serves up to 400 patients daily, there are only five clinical officers.

Umoja 1 Health Centre has only two clinical officers although it receives between 150 and 200 patients per day.

Mr Mboku asked the county government to employ more health workers to improve service delivery.

The MCA told the assembly that there were high chances of infection in the hospitals as patients with infectious diseases such as tuberculosis were not separated from other people seeking treatment.

WHAT'S ALLEGED

City Hall told to tackle issue

Health committee report says Umoja 1 and Jericho health centres have no ambulances yet they provide maternal services and refer patients to other hospitals.

The committee also noted poor disposal of solid waste at the hospitals, saying have no proper incinerators, which poses a health hazard.

Namwamba: I'm not vying for city seat

BY GODFREY OUNDOH

Budalangi MP Ababu Namwamba yesterday dismissed claims that he would vie for the Nairobi governorship in 2017.

The ODM secretary-general said he was not equally interested in the Lang'ata constituency seat formerly occupied by party leader Raila Odinga.

Addressing the press in Teso South, Mr Namwamba, who hosted Nairobi Governor Evans Kidero in his constituency for a church fundraiser at the weekend, said he would declare his candidature for any seat when the right time comes.

Running mate

His clarification follows reports that he wants to contest in Nairobi. "I am not going anywhere. I am still serving the interests of the people of Budalangi. I will announce to everyone, including the media, my future political prospects. Let us cross the bridge when we get there," he said.

Mr Namwamba said that he could only leave his constituency for a bigger seat and with the blessing of his supporters. "I can only become a running mate to a presidential candidate in 2017," Mr Namwamba said.

Kiambu | Cold blooded killings haunt company

Land firm directors to stay longer in custody

Directive follows police request for more time to complete probe

BY ERIC WAINAINA
ewainaina@ke.nationmedia.com

Six past and present directors of the troubled Kihiu Mwiri land-buying company arrested in connection with the killings and disappearances of their colleagues will be held for another three weeks.

Kiambu Resident Magistrate Simon Arome granted police permission to hold the six, who include a woman, for another 20 days.

Mr Joseph Thuo, Mr Henry Ngugi, Mr Joseph Muchui, Mr Harrison Kibande, Mr Bernard Murigi and Ms Mary Mugechi were arrested on July 31 when they presented themselves to the Criminal Investigations Directorate in Nairobi after an order by Inspector-General of Police Joseph Boinnet.

The order came after two more directors of the Murang'a company were executed in cold blood last Wednesday.

The six have been linked to the deaths of directors Wilfred Gichana, Charles Ngugi, Peter Kimani, Paul Muhuhi, Zachary Chege and Josphat Kibe.

They have also been linked to the disappearance of company chairman Peter Kariuki and directors James Kimaru, Jacob Mwangi and Simon Gitau.

The incidents occurred between March 25 last year and July 29 last month in Murang'a and Kiambu counties.

Mr John Wahome of the Directorate of Criminal Investigations said the six will be held at Muthaiga Police Station in Nairobi until August 24, when they are expected back in court.

BACKGROUND

Mystery deaths, disappearances

The latest killings in the Kihiu Mwiri land firm saga were on July 29, when Mr Chrispas Wanyoike and Mr Chege Mwangi were shot dead, bringing to eight the number of murdered directors.

Four other directors of the company are still missing, all this in less than two years.

More evidence

Mr Wahome, who is leading the investigation, said police required more time to interrogate the suspects and gather more evidence.

He said because of the large number of victims, investigating officers will need to make numerous trips to Kiambu and Murang'a counties to talk to witnesses.

Mr Wahome told the court that if released, apart from being a flight risk, the suspects were likely to interfere with the investigations by intimidating and threatening key witnesses.

Angry MCAs lock out clerk in perks row

AND MAGATI OBEBO

Drama unfolded yesterday at the Kisii County Assembly when some ward representatives abandoned a sitting and shut the clerk's office.

The clerk, Mr James Nyaoga, and the director of finance, Mr Joseph Ameyia, were locked out of their offices by angry MCAs, who accused them of frustrating their efforts to collect allowances.

Stumbling block

The reps also shut the public gallery and left the assembly in a huff shortly after. They accused the officials of being a "stumbling block".

Gesusu Ward MCA Sammy Ker-onche told the Nation: "Someone in the executive is using them to derail progress."

But Mr Nyaoga said the MCAs were blowing the matter out of proportion.

He said the reps wanted to collect monthly allowances for plenary sessions but none had attained the maximum number of sittings.

This was not the first time Mr Nyaoga had locked horns with reps. Two months ago, a report was adopted in the House implicating him and the director in a Sh9 million health insurance scandal.

The National Police Service basked in rare glory during choral verse performances under a special category at the national music festival in Kisumu.

The force was showered with praises through verses based on the theme "Together Let's Fight Terrorism", performed at Kisumu Boys High School by various schools when the festival entered its third day yesterday.

Pupils from Moses Mudavadi Primary School in the Nzoia Region presented "Sniff Out", a winning poem about how terrorism had interfered with children's peace. Kibera Primary School from Metropolitan was second, while Kamuiru Primary School was third.

The category was sponsored by the National Police Service and was aimed at promoting awareness on terrorism. Kisumu County Commander Nelson Njiri presented trophies and certificates to the winners.

Other outstanding performances were by Nakuru's Carol Academy, Little Angels Academy of Malindi, St Joseph Allamano of Northern Region and Musa Gitau and Masikonde primary schools.

Ginneries yet to reopen years after cash injection

BY LINET WAFULA

Cotton farmers in Busia have decried the long wait for the revival of ginneries two years after Sh43 million was released to reopen five factories in the area.

The county government had assured farmers that it will spend the money to revive the ginneries.

The Mulwanda ginnery, which used to be the biggest producer of lint and has the capacity to gin seven bales per day, was listed as the first to be revived.

A spot check by the Nation at the factory revealed that only partial renovation work had begun.

The Assembly Implementation Committee, after it visited the ginnery, reported that the renovation had not had any impact because no cotton was being processed at the plant.

During a debate on the revival of the factory recently, committee chairman Fred Musirimba asked why managers were not involved in the refurbishment of the facility.

The MCA also said there was a plot to loot the factory.

"The department has deliberately failed to revive these ginneries and should be held liable for the loss of taxpayers monies," he said.

A report tabled in the assembly by Mr Musirimba recommended that

Sh20m

The amount that was allocated for the revival of the factories last financial year but only Sh5m has been spent money allocated to the Mulwanda ginnery for the year 2015/2016 be reallocated to another project.

Mr Vincent Osumbe, the chairman of the Mulwanda Cotton Farmers Union, said their crop was decaying at the factory's stores.

Loans they obtained from a lender to grow more cotton in the hope that the factory will buy the crop are due.

"We were given a loan of Sh4 million to buy cotton seeds. However, the more than 50 tonnes of cotton is rotting in the stores," he said.

Mr Osumbe expressed fears that they may be unable to repay the loans.

"We have already distributed cotton seeds to farmers but we are still worried of how we will repay this loan. The cotton can produce up to 100 bales should it be ginned," said Mr Osumbe, also the chairman of The Matayos Farmers Co-operative Society.

Trade Executive Hillary Makhulu defended the county against allegations of lost funds. He said Sh20 million was allocated in the first phase of the 2013/2014 financial year but the money was never used since the procurement process took a long time.

"We never used the money due to delay in the procurement process and the money was never forwarded to the next financial year," he stated. Mr Makhulu said in the 2014/2015 financial, Sh23 million was allocated to the sector and only Sh5m had been used.

These are not our members, MRC protests over arrests

BY KAZUNGU SAMUEL

Mombasa Republican Council leaders have distanced themselves from 38 people arrested in a crackdown in Kilifi County.

MRC Secretary-General Randu Nzai, who spoke by phone, told the government to stop spreading lies about the group and instead address the escalating insecurity in the country.

"If council is responsible for the insecurity at the Coast, what about the killings and terror attacks in eastern and northeastern regions? The government should address security issues with sobriety. We are not a violent group," said Mr Nzai.

The official said he read in one of the dailies about the arrests in Kikambala as the suspects were waiting to be addressed by their leader, Mdudu Lewa, alias Breik.

Mr Nzai said Mr Lewa is not one of them.

"We do not have any person by that name in the council. Let the police do the right thing. We understand there might be criminals out there who are using our name to execute their deadly missions. We are not part of them," said Mr Nzai.

Kilifi County Police Commander Douglas Kanja said investigations were under way. He said the suspects would appear in court before the end of the week.

"We are sure of what we are doing. The operation was carried following credible intelligence reports. The people we arrested are giving us useful information," he said.

On Tuesday, residents of Mwarakaya protested over the crackdown. They camped at the Kilifi Police Station and accused the officers of harassing and beating locals.

Narok | Council demand review of land agreements

Maasai elders want ancestral land back

Community lost over 1.5 million acres over the years, they claim

@Gsayagie
gsayagie@ke.nationmedia.com

Maasai elders want the National Land Commission to investigate how the community lost its ancestral land before and after independence.

They have also demanded an apology from the British Government for injustices the community suffered during the colonial period, and that all the land that was wrongly allocated be returned.

Orkila Orok, the Maasai council of elders, claims the community lost more than 1.5 million acres over the years and hence should be compensated.

The elders, who addressed a news conference in Narok Town on Tuesday, said reparation, restitution and compensation should start with a review of the Maasai Land Agreements of 1904 and 1911, whose 100-year leases expired in 2004 and 2011.

The council's chairman, Mr Kasaine

Former Narok North MP William ole Ntimama

ole Esho, said some of the land was still in the hands of foreign companies, multinationals and remnants of colonial settlers, who are engaged in commercial agriculture.

He said colonialists and post-independence administrations took advantage of the nomadic lifestyle of the Maasai to grab their land.

Among the land they want returned are the 30,000 acres in Mau Narok they said were given to Mr Simeon Nyachae, Mr Mbiyu Koinange (when they served the Jomo Kenyatta government) and the Katumbe and Rose farms. In Naivasha, they demand huge parcels, among them Kedong, Dalamere and other ranches in Laikipia.

Former Cabinet Minister William ole Ntimama said all the leases on land considered to belong to the Maasai should be revised with the aim of reverting the land to the community.

He accused successive governments of extending the leases. The community's leaders would not rest until the rights of their people are respected, the former Narok North MP said.

"We have continued to be viewed as aggressors in our own land. The government should change its perception and give us our land as a measure towards addressing historical injustices," he added.

Varsities to be guarded by six officers

BY NICHOLAS KOMU

Each university and college in Nyeri will be allocated six police officers to beef up security.

Nyeri County Commander Michael Buluku also said that plans are under way to put up police posts on each campus.

Residential units will also be built for officers stationed in the schools.

"We have held talks with the institutions and construction will begin," said the police boss.

The move is meant to beef up security on the campuses and improve the response time when emergencies happen.

According to the commander, the six police officers would be shuffled regularly.

"We want to have the officers permanently based within the campuses. All security operations regarding the institutions will be run directly on the ground," said Mr Buluku.

"We would not want a repeat of what happened at Garissa University," he added.

PUBLIC NOTICE

THE CAPITAL MARKETS ACT (CAP. 485A)

REQUEST FOR STAKEHOLDER AND PUBLIC COMMENT ON THE PROPOSED REGULATORY FRAMEWORK FOR THE INTRODUCTION OF EXCHANGE TRADED FUNDS (ETFs) IN KENYA

ETFs are a type of listed securities in form of index or units traded on a securities exchange. The index or unit may be composed of ordinary stocks, bonds, commodities, derivatives or a combination of real assets whose price movement is in tandem with the price movement of the constituent underlying securities or commodities. An ETF can be a domestic or offshore product.

The introduction of an ETFs market in Kenya will offer investors an alternative option to invest in a pool of securities or other assets in a formal securities exchange environment. Additionally, ETFs offer a mechanism for reducing exposure to significant price fluctuations that sometimes characterize arbitrary buying and selling of securities.

The proposed regulatory framework provides a guide to listing ETFs in Kenya, identifies and proposes measures to mitigate the potential regulatory risks. The overarching objective of the framework is to promote market confidence and integrity in line with the drive for fair and efficient financial markets in Kenya.

As a regulator and market development facilitator, the Authority has been working closely with key market stakeholders in the development of the policy and the proposed regulatory framework. The introduction of ETFs is in line with the delivery of the Capital Markets 10 year Master Plan (CMMP) and Kenya's Vision 2030 targets on making Kenya a competitive finance and investment centre.

This Notice has been issued in accordance with section 12A of the Capital Markets Act to commence stakeholder and public consultation for a period of the next thirty (30) days. The proposed regulatory framework is available on the Capital Markets Authority website: - www.cma.or.ke. Kindly submit your comments on the draft framework by September 6, 2015 via email or hand delivery or post to: -

President Kikwete said the ruling party would not give the former PM room to defeat it.

Mr Lowassa was Prime Minister between 2005 and 2008, when he resigned over corruption allegations. He denies the claims.

He will run for the top post for Chadema, as well as the Civic United Front, NCCR-Mageuzi and the National League for Democracy.

Mr Lowassa had joined the race earlier this month to run as CCM presidential candidate, where he was seen as a frontrunner among 42 candidates, but lost out to government minister John Pombe Magufuli.

Following his defeat, Mr Lowassa said the ruling party was infested with leaders who are dictators, undemocratic and surrounded by greedy power mongers.

In his first remarks since Mr Lowassa's defection from CCM, Mr Kikwete said: "Even in life when your child wrongs you by joining the side of your opponents you deal with him or her as you would have dealt with the group to show that you are the father."

And without mentioning names, the President, who is also the ruling party chairman, added: "Those who have quit CCM are now on our crosshairs and the right side for us to strike them."

President Kikwete was addressing members who had turned out to escort the CCM candidate for the presidency, Dr

Ours is the coalition of victory. We are out to take over from CCM"

Freeman Mbowe, Chadema Chairman

John Pombe Magufuli, to collect the National Electoral Commission nomination forms.

The remarks by the President widened the gap between him and his erstwhile political bosom friend. In 1995, the two campaigned together and bid for the presidency and were popularly referred to as "Boys II Men".

The ruling CCM has dominated politics since modern Tanzania was formed in 1964.

Currently, it has two-thirds of seats in Parliament.

The four opposition parties will also field joint candidates for parliamentary and council seats.

"Ours is the coalition of victory. We are out to take over from CCM," Chadema national chairman Freeman Mbowe told a meeting of the party on Tuesday.

"Our party's central committee nominated Mr Lowassa to run for president last week, and the decision was endorsed by the national congress."

Mr Juma Duni Haji, who recently resigned as minister for infrastructure development in the semi-autonomous Zanzibar Government, was named Mr Lowassa's running mate.

President Kikwete cannot stand again after serving two terms.

During his much-publicised defection recently, Mr Lowassa said he wanted "to bring positive and meaningful change in our society".

Tanzania, with over 50 million people, is East Africa's most populous country, with economic growth of more than seven per cent, according to the World Bank.

Despite the advances, the country remains poor by regional and international standards, with agriculture as the key sector providing a quarter of the Gross Domestic Product.

UN asks Somalia authorities to probe British firm for corruption

UNITED NATIONS, Wednesday

A UN sanctions committee wants Somalia to open a corruption investigation after uncovering evidence that British oil firm Soma paid off Somali civil servants under a 2013 contract.

The evidence came in a 28-page report by the UN's Somalia and Eritrea monitoring group and listed 14 employees of Somalia's petroleum and mineral resources ministry who allegedly received payments ranging from $1,600 to $36,000 from Soma.

It also said six officials on Soma's payroll drew civil servant salaries and that nearly $500,000 was paid to a Canadian lawyer J Jay Park as an independent legal adviser to the ministry.

A letter drafted by the chairman of the UN's Somalia-Eritrea Sanctions Committee, Rafael Ramirez, called on Somalia to investigate.

In 2013, Soma, chaired by former British Conservative Party leader Michael Howard, won a lucrative contract to survey Somalia's southern and central coast, and it later secured the rights to explore 12 offshore oil and gas blocks.

The deal raised hopes of reviving Somalia's oil and gas industry, on hold for decades during civil war and years of Islamic insurgency.

But the sanctions committee letter requests that Somali authorities promptly investigate and undertake prosecutions, where appropriate, of individuals and entities found to have been engaged in misappropriation of public resources in violation of the Somalia sanctions regime.

The monitoring group has obtained evidence demonstrating that Soma has been making regular payments since June 2014 to civil servants in the ministry of petroleum," it says. (AFP)

CONFERENCE
27th -29th Oct. 2015

An initiative of.....

Mount Kenya University

Leipzig (Germany)

International Conference to explore new concepts for business acceleration in Africa

The International Conference on Advancement of Business Management Practices in Africa (ICABUMPA) and the Intelligence for innovation (iN4iN) Conference 2015 is a collaboration between Mount Kenya University (MKU), Leipzig University - Germany and Equip Africa Institute. The conference will bring together policy makers, Industrialists, academia, SME's and entrepreneurs.

Welcome Note

Dr. Vincent Gaitho, PhD
Chairman, Steering Committee

The recently concluded GES summit attended by US President Barack Obama raised the profile of Kenya as a home of entrepreneurship & innovation. President Obama on several occasions declared that "Kenya is on the move", sentiments echoed by his host President Kenyatta when he described Kenya as a "hotbed of vibrant culture, spectacular natural beauty and infinite possibility". To further the gains of GES, Mount Kenya University in collaboration with Leipzig University, Germany have organized a conference dubbed "ICABUMPAiN4iN Conference 2015". The conference under the theme "New Concepts for Business Acceleration for Africa" will be held in October 2015 at KICC. For more details, visit the conference website.

Sub-Themes

- Role of Universities in business startup and acceleration.
- Entrepreneurial eco-systems for business acceleration
- The role of diaspora in promoting business acceleration in Africa
- Sustainable strategies and models for business incubation and acceleration
- Environmental and social aspects of business acceleration
- Business financing and acceleration
- Practical orientated entrepreneurship training & promotion
- The role of monitoring and evaluation in entrepreneurship promotion
- Innovation models in tourism management for Africa
- ICT in Business

CALL FOR PAPERS

The abstracts of full papers, and/or posters not exceeding 300 words should be e-mailed to icabumpain4in@mku.ac.ke. Abstracts should clearly highlight the objective, problem, methodology, key findings/results, conclusions, recommendations and six key words.

ULTIMATUM| Regional leaders give Kiir and Machar until August 17 to strike deal

Rebels say S. Sudan army blocking aid

UN official says barges on River Nile carrying food and medical supplies to the north, areas largely occupied by Machar forces, are constantly stopped

JUBA, Wednesday
South Sudan's army has dismissed as propaganda rebel claims of an aid blockade aimed at starving them into submission.
The United Nations and humanitarian agencies have also said relief was being restricted, including into areas on the brink of famine.

But army spokesman Philip Aguer denied it had stopped boats from using River Nile, the main route for aid into the largely roadless northern areas.

“While boats were told that they risked coming under rebel attack, reports of a blockade were not based on concrete facts,” Mr Aguer said.
The rebels accuse the government of using aid restrictions to weaken them.
“The regime is using starvation as a weapon to kill thousands of our people,” rebel spokesman James Gadet said.
“The pretext that our forces have been attacking barges carrying relief assistance is false.”
UN aid chief Stephen O'Brien said on a visit to the country last month that barges carrying food and medical supplies were being stopped.

Mr O'Brien repeated the need for rapid and unhindered access recalling how he had asked President Salva Kiir to ensure restrictions on Nile aid transport be lifted immediately.
South Sudan's civil war began in December 2013 when Mr Kiir accused his former deputy, Riek Machar, of planning a coup, setting off a cycle of retaliatory killings that has split the country along ethnic lines.
Regional mediators have given the two rivals until August 17 to stop the bloodbath. (AFP)

Somaliland VP pleads for famine aid

BY ABDULKADIR KHALIF
NATION correspondent in Mogadishu
Vice-president of Somaliland Abdurahlan Abdullahi Ismael Saylaee has appealed for international assistance following a serious drought in the region.
Mr Saylaee said 20,000 families in western Somaliland had run out of food.
The area has not received rain for eight months.
“I call upon the people of Somaliland, in and out of the country, and the international aid agencies and friends to assist our people,” he said.
He also asked businesspeople to provide food.
He advised those interested in helping “to act quickly because the infrastructure was bad and it takes time to reach the victims”.
The vice-president said the drought had decimated crops and thousands of animals.
Somaliland declared independence from the rest of Somalia in 1991, following the overthrow of General Mohamed Siad Barre. The region though is not recognised internationally.
Meanwhile, Ms Zahra Mohamed Ali Samatar, Somalia's minister for women affairs and human rights, has vowed to bring to an end female genital mutilation in the Horn of Africa country.

anti counterfeit agency

REQUEST FOR EXPRESSION OF INTEREST (EOI) FOR LEASING OF OFFICE SPACE AND GO DOWNS

The Anti-Counterfeit Agency (ACA) is a State Corporation under the Ministry of Industrialization and Enterprise Development which was established under the Anti-Counterfeit Act, 2008 to prohibit trade in counterfeit goods in Kenya.

The Agency is currently based in Nairobi and Mombasa and would like to spread its services to its customers in other regions so as to serve the Intellectual Property Rights Owners, members of the public and Government Interests. The regions targeted include Busia, Namanga, Garissa, Eldoret and Kisumu.

In view of this, the Agency wishes to lease offices that will accommodate its staff in an environment that is conducive for efficient delivery of services.

Due to the growth in the Nairobi office, the Agency wishes to relocate from its current location and the preferred location for the office in Nairobi County is Industrial Area, Westlands or Upper hill. The office space required is approximately 12,000 square feet, located within the same building and on consecutive floors.

For Kisumu, Eldoret, Namanga, Busia and Garissa indicate location and available space sufficient for a minimum of 15 officers. The Go down sizes and location in each of the above towns including Mombasa and Nairobi should also be provided.

The building should be approved by the relevant authorizing bodies: be properly licensed and registered as commercial/ office premises under the laws of Kenya.

Universal Access: The premises should comply with section 22(1) of the persons with Disability Act (Act 14 of 2003) and other related laws and regulations. In addition the offices should have sufficient air circulation and lighting: reliable power and water supply: adequate parking: 24 hour security; elevator/lifts if floors offered is on a floor higher than ground floor.

Eligibility: The EOI is open to Estate Agents registered in Kenya who have appropriate and valid accreditations: or individual landlords with the capacity to enter into a contract for the lease of office premises.

One must possess the following:

1. Certificate of company registration
2. Certificate of valid tax compliance
3. Certificate of registration with Estate Agents Registration Board for Estate Agents and proof of ownership of the premises for Landlords

The Expression of interest should be sealed and marked "EOI for leasing of Office Space and Go down" and addressed to:

AMNESTY | Former civil servants take advantage of grace period to return illegally-acquired assets

Stolen Nigeria cash traced to banks

BY MOHAMMED MOMOH

in Abuja

Nigeria says it has identified banks, financial institutions and countries hoarding stolen crude oil money.

A top official said President Muhammadu Buhari would soon begin the process of recovering the money.

Some looters have started releasing part of their money to the government to take advantage of an amnesty.

and Publicity to the President, Mr Femi Adesina, said Mr Buhari talked about the financial institutions and countries when he met United States Congressmen, led by Mr Darrel Issa.

“We are getting co-operation from the international community, including information on ships that take crude oil from Nigeria and change direction or transfer their contents into other ships mid-stream,” Mr Adesina said.

He said some money was paid to individual accounts and that efforts were ongoing to identify more countries and people involved.

“We have been assured that when we get the needed documents, the US and other countries will treat our case with sympathy and urgently,” he said.

President Buhari acknowledged the support his administration was getting from the international community.

He told the congressmen that his administration would welcome more meetings of the Nigeria-US bilateral commission.

Mr Darrel assured him that the US would support Nigeria against Boko Haram insurgency by providing training, intelligence and military assistance.

“We look forward to helping you in many ways to end the insurgency and the theft of crude oil in the Gulf of Guinea,” he said.

Many former public officers have started returning money and properties acquired illegally.

A source at the presidency said the administration promised not to prosecute anyone who voluntarily relinquished the loot.

“Some people are returning dollars, cars, and houses,” the source said.

Meanwhile, Nigerian banks have released a list of chronic debtors, including 15 billionaires.

The Central Bank of Nigeria said debtors risked being banned from accessing foreign exchange.

ALGIERS, Wednesday

Apparently modest reform proposals for primary education in Algeria have touched off a firestorm of protest, highlighting sensitivities about language and identity half a century after independence.

Standard Arabic has been the North African nation’s official language since 1962, even though virtually no Algerians have it as their mother tongue.

A little over a quarter of the population speak dialects of the Berber language.

Nearly all the rest speak dialects of Arabic that are heavily influenced by French, Spanish and Berber.

Education Minister Nouria Benghebrit has proposed that for the first two years of primary school, teachers be allowed to give lessons in dialect to help children master the standard language.

The proposals have drawn accusations from nationalists and Islamists alike that she is dishonouring the memory of the thousands of Algerians who lost their lives and “betraying the cause they fought for.”

Islamist lawmakers of the Green Alliance demanded her immediate dismissal. (AFP)

NATIONAL COMMISSION FOR SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY AND INNOVATION (NACOSTI)

CALL FOR REVIEWERS 2015/2016 FINANCIAL YEAR

The National Commission for Science, Technology and Innovation (NACOSTI), is established under the Science Technology and Innovation Act, 2013. It is mandated to regulate and assure quality in the science, technology and innovation sector and advise the government in matters related thereto. The role of Science, Technology and Innovation (ST&I) in socio-economic transformation is well recognized. NACOSTI as the premier body is fully committed to steer scientific advancement and technological development in the country.

The generation, dissemination and application of new knowledge is critical for economic growth. The Kenya Vision 2030 envisages a knowledge based economy which has the capacity to compete in the global market. This is highly dependent on the ability to innovate, adopt and apply the relevant technologies to industries and productive sectors. To achieve this, research and ST&I will play a pivotal role.

In line with promotion of ST&I and research for national development, NACOSTI has been administering the Government Research Endowment Fund since its inception in 2008/2009 financial year. The purpose of this Fund is to support scientific research and innovations in ST&I priority areas to complement the goals of Vision 2030. The Research Endowment Fund has to date supported a total of 1,534 research and innovation projects throughout the country in both public and private institutions.

In this regard, NACOSTI is pleased to invite professionals from public and private sectors to submit copies of their CV, and digital passport size photos to update compilation of a complete database of peer reviewers of research proposals. The CV in soft copy should be submitted through the email reviewers@nacosti.go.ke by 30th September, 2015.

People visit the Peace Memorial Park to pray for victims of the atomic bombing in Hiroshima yesterday. Hiroshima marks the 70th anniversary of the world's first atomic attack today.

Hiroshima marks 70 years since bomb fell

HIROSHIMA, Wednesday

Charred bodies bobbed in the brackish waters that flowed through Hiroshima 70 years ago this week, after a once-vibrant Japanese city was consumed by the searing heat of the world's first nuclear attack. The smell of burned flesh filled the air as scores of survivors with severe burns dived into rivers to escape the inferno. Countless hundreds never emerged, pushed under the surface by the mass of desperate humanity. "It was a white, silvery flash," Sunao Tsuboi, 90, said of the moment the United States unleashed what was then the most destructive weapon ever produced. "I don't know why I survived and lived this long," said Tsuboi. "The more I think about it... the more painful it becomes to recall." Seven decades since the attack, the city of 1.2 million people is once again thriving as a commercial hub, but the scars of the bombing — physical and emotional — still remain. It was 8:15 am on August 6, 1945 when a B-29 bomber called Enola Gay flying high over the city released Little Boy, a uranium bomb with a destructive force equivalent to 16 kilotons of TNT. Just 43 seconds later, when it was 600 metres (1,800 feet) from the ground, it erupted into a blistering fireball burning at a million degrees Celsius (1.8 million Fahrenheit). Nearly everything around it was incinerated, with the ground level hit by a wall of heat up to 4,000 degrees Celsius — hot enough to melt steel. Stone buildings survived, but bore the shadows of anything — or anyone — that was charred in front of them. Gusts of around 1.5 kilometres a second roared outwards carrying with them shattered debris, and packing enough force to rip limbs and organs from bodies. The air pressure suddenly dropped due to the blast, crushing those on the ground, and an ominous mushroom cloud rose, towering 16 kilometres above the city. About 140,000 people are estimated to have been killed in the attack. Years afterwards, many found it difficult to get jobs or to marry. Even today, some nuclear survivors or hibakusha avoid talking openly about their experience for fear of discrimination. Hiroshima mayor Kazumi Matsui, 62, whose mother survived the bombing, said he has only recently begun discussing the personal effects of the attack. "I know personally how a single bomb changed many people's lives," said Matsui, a father of four and grandfather of six. Three days after Hiroshima, the US military dropped a plutonium bomb on the port city of Nagasaki, killing about 74,000 people. (AFP)

Life returns to island years after slaughter

Four years after Anders Behring Breivik's bloody rampage, the Norwegian island of Utoya will return to life this weekend as it hosts its first Labour youth camp since the carnage. More than 1,000 participants — a record number — are expected to descend on the tiny heart-shaped island from Friday to Sunday, including a handful of survivors. Breivik killed 69 people, most of them teenagers, on July 22, 2011. (AFP)

Qatar disagrees with league over Turkey

Qatar has broken ranks with the Arab League to give close ally Turkey its full support for air strikes in northern Iraq. On Tuesday, the Arab League condemned Turkey's actions and called on Ankara to recognise the sovereignty of Iraq. The Arab League also called on Turkey and Iraq to increase co-operation in order to preserve peace. Doha, however, later distanced itself from the Arab League declaration. (AFP)

Parties want action over treason row

Germany's opposition piled pressure on Chancellor Angela Merkel's government in a widening row over a controversial treason probe targeting bloggers who had written about Internet surveillance. In an affair that claimed the scalp of the chief prosecutor, critics are now asking why ministers allowed Germany's first media treason investigation in years to go ahead. Leftist parties have demanded a public inquiry. (AFP)

UN REPORT | Horror of violence revealed

Civilian casualties in Afghanistan rise

Taliban violence spreads from its southern and eastern turf

KABUL, Wednesday

Civilian casualties in Afghanistan hit a record high in the first half of 2015, the UN has said.

In a worrying trend, ground combat is causing more deaths and injuries than improvised explosive devices and the conflict is taking a particularly heavy toll on women and children.

The growing insecurity as Afghan forces face their first summer fighting season without full Nato support coincides with a faltering peace process, with the Taliban confronted by a bitter power transition.

Total casualties — the combined number of civilians killed and wounded — between January and June increased by one per cent compared with the same period last year, the UN Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (Unama) said.

The report said 1,592 civilians were killed, a six per cent fall over last year, while the number of injured jumped four per cent to 3,329.

The figures represent an average of around nine civilians killed and 18 wounded daily.

The casualties have reached their highest level since the UN began issuing its authoritative reports in 2009.

“The cold statistics of civilian casualties do not adequately capture the horror of violence in Afghanistan, the torn bodies of children, mothers and daughters, sons and fathers,” said Unama chief Nicholas Haysom.

“The statistics in this report do not reveal the grieving families and the loss of shocked communities of ordinary Afghans. These are the real consequences of the conflict.”

Unama attributed 70 per cent of civilian casualties to anti-government elements including the Taliban, while highlighting a 60 per cent increase in casualties caused by pro-government forces compared to 2014.

Female casualties soared 23 per cent and child casualties increased by 13 per cent as civilians are increasingly caught in the crossfire.

“The thousands of civilians killed and injured from conflict-related violence... demonstrate the continued failure of parties to the conflict to protect them from harm,” the report said.

The statistics are a grim indicator of rising violence as the Taliban insurgency spreads north from its traditional southern and eastern strongholds, with Afghan forces increasingly battling the militants on their own.

US-led Nato forces ended their combat mission in Afghanistan in December, leaving local forces to battle militants alone, but a 13,000-strong residual force remains for training and counter-terrorism operations.

“When the Nato combat mission was on, the Taliban mostly used guerrilla tactics,” Graeme Smith, a senior analyst with the International Crisis Group in Afghanistan said.

“Now they have grown bolder as they face Afghan forces directly. That explains why civilian casualties have risen.”

27 die as two Indian trains derail

NEW DELHI, Wednesday

Two passenger trains derailed after being hit by flash floods on a bridge in central India, killing at least 27 people in the latest deadly accident on the crumbling rail network.

Rescuers have been searching through the night for passengers trapped on the trains that toppled when a swollen river struck the tracks in Madhya Pradesh state, railway officials said.

Roughly 300 people were rescued after about 10 of the trains' carriages derailed outside the town of Harda at about 11.30pm.

A passenger described how water poured into the carriages in the minutes after the accident.

“Water filled the coach till here,” the unnamed man told a TV station, pointing to his waist.

Another said there was a sudden jerk and the carriage broke and people were crushed.

Television footage showed carriages lying on their sides in a field of mud and medical supplies piled on a nearby station platform.

“There have been 27 deaths due to the accidents,” Madhya Pradesh railway police chief MS Gupta said.

“The coaches have been cleared and all bodies have collected from inside,” he said, adding that the death toll could rise.

At least another 25 people have been injured and taken to hospital, other rescue officials said, adding that carriages had not sunk in the river.

The Kamayani Express travelling from the financial city of Mumbai appeared to have been hit by a sudden surge of water on the swollen Machak river, derailling the last four to five carriages.

The Janata Express, travelling to Mumbai from the eastern city of Patna, was also hit by the water, with the engine and the first three carriages derailling. (AFP)

Regulator surprises market by retaining its policy figure despite the need to shore up the shilling

@masindej
jmasinde@ke.nationmedia.com

The Central Bank of Kenya surprised markets yesterday by leaving its policy rate unchanged at 11.50 per cent after an emergency meeting.

Virtually all the analysts whom the Nation had spoken to prior to the Monetary Policy Meeting (MPC) held yesterday, were in favour of another rate increase, a move that would further support the shilling from weakening against the dollar. Some had projected a rise of as much as 1.5 percentage points, equalling two previous increases.

At the meeting yesterday, Central Bank Governor, Dr Patrick Njoroge, said whereas the foreign exchange market was volatile in early July 2015, it has stabilised in part due to the impact of its monetary policy measures.

There has been aggressive mopping up of excess liquidity from the market prompting the interbank rate to stay above 20 per cent sparking fears that banks would pass on the lofty cost of credit to borrowers. This has provided the shilling with the much-needed support, arresting rapid weakening against the dollar.

"In particular, open market operations and the sale of foreign exchange by the CBK have stemmed the volatility and resulted in tight liquidity conditions. The current account deficit has widened mainly due to imports of capital goods and lower earnings from exports. Nevertheless, diaspora remittances have remained strong," Dr Njoroge said.

Forex dealers said traders had sold dollars in anticipation of a rate rise on the day that the MPC held its meeting.

"Although market sentiment was for a rate increase, it is a good thing they didn't raise the rate because inflation is in check, the market is very illiquid and the shilling has remained supported in the past couple of days," said a senior forex trader at a commercial bank.

Other analysts, however, indicated that the shilling will come under pressure in the coming days following the rate hold. During yesterday's trading, anticipation of an increase had sparked a dollar sell in the market, a move, which coupled with the high interbank rate, provided some support to the shilling.

Yesterday, the shilling closed trading much stronger, a trend it had maintained since Monday, supported by tight liquidity that has pushed up the interbank lending rate at over 20 per cent. The shilling closed trading at 100.70/100.80 to the dollar compared to 101.10/101.20 at which it traded by the end of Tuesday.

Raised the rate

At its meeting in June and July, the CBK raised its Central Bank rate (CBR) by a cumulative 3 percentage points to rein in rapid depreciation of the shilling that had weakened beyond the 100-units to the dollar. Coupled with frequent liquidity mop-ups in the market, the CBK noted that such measures would support the shilling from any further depreciation.

Partnership deal puts online buyer in the driver's seat

BY NATION CORRESPONDENT

Plurro, an online bargains hunter, has officially launched operations in the Kenyan market.

The US-based Plurro is being established in partnership with Barclays Bank with Kenya being the first of its international markets.

"What we are launching in Kenya is a platform that lets the consumer decide whether and when they want to shop," said Mr Kim Muhota, founder and CEO Plurro. His app is among innovations featuring at the Nairobi Innovation Week.

Support start-ups

Barclays Kenya Managing Director Jeremy Awori said the move by the financial institution to venture whole-heartedly into supporting startups is the fact that the banking sector is not immune to innovation, a factor perpetrated mainly by creative youth who happen to be in dire need of necessary assistance.

"This is really just the beginning because we want to take part in creating the innovation ecosystem. We are proud we could play a part in this," Mr Awori said.

The company, which uses mobile technology to help identify crowds of shoppers who want specific products or services at specific stores and then negotiates with the store owner for the best possible discount on behalf of them, will launch on both Android and iPhone handsets.

Mr Muhota said the product will also be available on traditional feature phones before the end of the year.

"What makes our technology so disruptive is that we are levelling the playing field for small and medium enterprises who can now compete with large retail corporations because the barriers to consumer access are eliminated. Crowd sourcing and the shared economy are redefining business around the world and nowhere is that truer than in Kenya and Africa where these dynamics are already so deeply engrained in the culture," Mr Muhota said.

A prospective customer needs to sign up, create a business profile of the shop one intends to buy from at the discount of choice, invite a number to suggest shopping at the same price then wait for the green-light to go shopping once negotiations between the company and the prospective shop is settled.

His reason for Kenyans to take to Plurro is just this: "In China, this is the thing. It's all done in forums and chatrooms - a very informal process, but it puts the power to decide directly in the hands of the consumer."

Pair to benefit from new animal markets

West Pokot and Turkana counties are set to benefit from livestock markets that will be constructed by funds from African Development Bank under the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) project meant to improve the incomes of people in the two regions. Wananchi retains top spot in ranking Wananchi Group has maintained its position as the leader in fixed Internet sector with a market share of 46.8 per cent. The firm operates a triple play platform in which broadband, pay TV and voice telephony are offered through one cable. "Wananchi Telecom had the highest market share during the quarter under review to record 46.8 per cent," the Communications Authority of Kenya (CA) latest quarterly statistics said. The trend has been supported by diversification of its products.

Experts now warn of low maize harvests

Unpredictable rainfall and repeated outbreak of viral disease have dealt a blow to maize production in most parts of the North Rift region with agriculture experts warning of low harvest this season. Uasin Gishu County Director of Agriculture Joseph Cheboi said most crops experienced poor moisture as a result of depressed rainfall with some showing nutritional deficiency that will result in low yields. He said they expected to harvest 4.5 million bags of maize this season.

New rules for exchange out

BY NATION CORRESPONDENT

The Capital Markets Authority has released guidelines for the effecting of the Exchange Traded Funds (ETF) in Kenya, a move that will further increase the products available for investment in the market.

The rules, which are now open to the public for scrutiny prior to the establishment of the exchange, precede the crafting of those to oversee this investment platform.

ETF is an investment fund such as a unit trust that is traded on a securities exchange. It may track an index, a commodity or a sector.

The index or unit may be composed of ordinary shares, bonds, commodities, derivatives or a combination of assets whose price movement is in tandem with the movement of the underlying securities or commodities.

“The introduction of an ETF market in Kenya is targeted at offering investors another option to invest in a pool of securities and other assets, in a formal securities exchange environment,” the guidelines, which were released yesterday, said.

Kenya bets on Chinese carrier to boost trade

World third largest airline makes maiden trip to Nairobi in what will be a thrice a week flight

BY YVONNE KAWIRA
@YvonneKawira
ymurori@ke.nationmedia.com

Kenya is counting on the entry of a Chinese airline to boost both business and leisure travel between the two countries.

China Southern Airlines (CZ), the country's biggest airline and world third, yesterday made its first flight to Nairobi from Guangzhou — the commercial capital of China.

It will fly thrice a week.

Kenya Airways, which also flies to Guangzhou via Hanoi, is to gain by making connecting flights to passengers flying to other Africa countries. The two will now provide 20 flights per week on the route.

Code-sharing agreement

“We welcome China Southern Airline's entry into Kenya as it is complementary to our presence on the route as we have a code-share agreement in place. KQ customers can now connect to other destinations in China, Asia given China Southern's extensive presence in those markets,” said Kenya Airways Group Managing Director Mbuvi Ngunze.

KQ and CZ have had a code-sharing agreement for the past six years after having signed it in 2009.

For China Southern, the Nairobi-Guangzhou is the second route to Africa having set up operations between Shenzhen and Mauritius last year.

“We hope our additional flights will provide our guests with convenience besides increasing the number of business and leisure travellers into Africa and Asia,” China Southern Airlines Chairman Si Xianmin. The Ministry of East Africa Affairs, Commerce and Tourism sees the launch as a shot in the arm for the industry.

Traditional source markets

Kenya's traditional source markets are China, the United Kingdom, Australia and Germany, among others. Europeans are aggressively marketing their tourism sector in China hoping to get a slice of emerging middle class.

“With over 100 million Chinese tourists who travel the world, China should be among the top three tourism markets for Kenya,” Kenya Tourism Board (KTB) Managing Director Muriithi Ndegwa said.

The board has, therefore, embarked on marketing the country in China in a bid to increase the arrivals from the country with the hope that the direct flight would boost tourist numbers.

Dominance rules split authority and the AG

CA insists it will push ahead with their push despite opposition by the Attorney General's office

@LilianMerab
laochieng@ke.nationmedia.com

The Communications Authority of Kenya says it will stand its ground and push through with dominance regulations even after the Attorney General called for the rules to be withdrawn from Parliament for consultation.

Speaking to the Nation, CA director general Francis Wangusi said the authority will now broaden its reach to capture broadcasting and courier sectors.

Advised the ministry

In a letter to the ICT Cabinet Secretary Fred Matiang'i dated July 9, 2015, Attorney General Githu Muigai advised the ministry to withdraw the regulations from the National Assembly and "subject them to discussions in all aspects as contemplated by the MoU (between CA and Competitions Authority of Kenya)."

Admitting that no consultations were done with the competition body, Mr Wangusi said that was not necessary at this stage given that CAK role will come in at a point where there is an overlap between the jurisdiction and CA regulations.

"CAK is not our regulator; we have to regulate the sector and apply fair competition rules before the market crashes," Mr Wangusi said.

CAK director general Wang'ombe Kariuki said since the signing of the MoU, he has been awaiting a meeting with the CA on how the two regulators can amicably iron out the matter.

"We have to concur in terms of regulations, after the signing of the MoU, we were to do a joint training, this would enable us handle competition cases in the sector together. We are yet to concur in all these," said Mr Kariuki on phone yesterday.

9, 2015

Date of the letter from the Attorney General Githu Muigai to ICT Cabinet Secretary Fred Matiang'i

Mr Wangusi said the regulations are yet to be tabled in Parliament because of the current recess.

The arguments on dominance come at a time when Airtel had succeeded in lobbying Parliament and the ICT ministry to declare Safaricom dominant.

The regulations if passed by Parliament, will aim to punish abusive dominant players in the communications sector.

Sh850bn Suez Canal opens today

CORRESPONDENT

Thousands of regional dignitaries and millions of Egyptians gather today as the country opens its mega maritime infrastructure set to double revenues from international trade.

The Sh850 billion second Suez Canal promises to be a catalyst for inter-cementing Egypt's position in the global trading arena and propelling its centuries old maritime industry. Egypt President Abdel Fattah El Sisi is due to host visitors from all over the world in the opening feat. The new vessel channel will funnel close to 15 per cent of world trade to Egypt and effectively to Africa.

While addressing the UN general assembly in New York on August 5, 2014 president El Sisi outlined the vision for the construction of the second waterway with the aim of doubling one of the world's most utilised trade passages. "It is the Egyptian people's gift to the world," he said. The canal links the Red Sea and the Mediterranean Sea. Excitement is rife in Cairo with Egyptians celebrating in the streets as official businesses are expected to be interrupted in what appears to be an unofficial public holiday.

Defiant and angry Clarke slams critics, cites records and vows to keep playing

Sydney

Defiant and angry Australian captain Michael Clarke yesterday vowed to keep playing after the Ashes series with England, with those suggesting he was finished talking "a complete load of rubbish".

Pressure has been building on Clarke, who has a meagre Ashes series total of 94 runs in six innings at an average of under 19, with Australian media Tuesday saying he looked "lost" and knew the end was near.

But the 34-year-old, who has scored 28 Test centuries, said he was going nowhere, with the desire to play still burning strongly.

"The criticisms of my game at the moment are deserved and I wouldn't expect anything different, especially as the captain of the team," he said in a column for Sydney's Daily Telegraph. "But I've heard there have been a few articles questioning me for not having that hunger inside me."

"To question me on my hunger kills me, it absolutely kills me, because I pride myself on trying to get better every single day. After 13 years in this team I still think I can improve"

Michael Clarke, Aussie captain

I think somebody said they could 'see it in my eyes' that I was finished after this series. "That's a complete load of rubbish." The Sydney Morning Herald's chief sports writer Andrew Webster said on Tuesday Clarke's expression "with each cheap dismissal is undeniable: it is a blank expression of utter bewilderment. He isn't annoyed but lost".

Peter Lalor, cricket writer for The Australian, added to Clarke's woes by saying that failure in the fourth Test in Nottingham starting Thursday "spells an almost certain end to his career". Clarke said: "People can certainly have a shot at me about my performance, but they can't have a shot at me about my desire and my will to play this great game."

Stood up in the past

"To this day, I'm the first to training and the last to leave, so don't tell me that I don't have the desire and the hunger," he said.

"I have no intention to walk away from cricket. "Chris Rogers waited until 35 years of age to play his second Test. I'm 34 not 37 and I want to keep playing for Australia beyond this series, however I will be judged on performance like everyone else."

He added: "To question me on my hunger kills me, it absolutely kills me, because I pride myself on trying to get better every single day. After 13 years in this team I still think I can improve." Australia are 2-1 down in the five-Test series and while Clarke has admitted that his poor form meant the team had been "playing with 10 players", he is confident his touch will soon return.

"Under pressure is how I've stood up in the past and that's the challenge I face now," he said. "I feel like the one time I got in this series, I declared in the second innings at Lord's, and I need to have another innings like that where I get in." (AFP)

626 students to fly Kenyan flag in Rwanda

byonga@ke.nationmedia.com

Kenya will be represented by 626 students at the 14th edition of the Brookside Federation of East Africa Secondary School Sports Association (FEASSSA) games slated for August 15-22 in Huye, Rwanda.

The 321 boys and 305 girls drawn from 47 secondary schools will fight for medals with their counterparts from Uganda, Tanzania, Burundi, South Sudan and the hosts across 12 disciplines.

Kenya will be out to reclaim the overall team title which it lost for the first time last year in Tanzania to neighbours Uganda since the inception of the games in 2002.

The regional games will be held in seven venues with the opening ceremony set to be held at the University of Rwanda Stadium on August 15. The games will officially begin on August 16 as 2,682 students do battle for the bragging rights.

The venue will host athletics, boys' basketball, law tennis, badminton with the closing ceremony also to be done at the university's stadium.

Defending champions Uganda will have the highest contingent at the games with 739 students drawn from 56 Ugandan schools charged with ensuring the county retains the title.

Rwanda will have 504 participants while Burundi and Tanzania will field 249 and 408 players respectively. South Sudan will have the smallest representation at the annual games with 156 participants set to battle for glory.

Dominant Ugandans

Rugby Sevens will make its debut at this year's games. Kenya will be represented by national champions St Peters School Mumias (Nzoia Region) and losing finalists Kangaru School (Aberdare Region).

Uganda will field two schools with the hosts parading three in the discipline which will be played at TTC Save, 12km from Huye. The boys' football bonanza, which is expected to be tightly contested, will be held at the Opedei Stadium.

Kenyan representatives in the discipline, national champions Passenga High and runners-up Laiser Hill, have their work cut out in trying to wrestle the title from champions St Mary's Kitende from Uganda.

The Ugandan school has dominated the discipline and will be favourites to retain their title.

St Anthony's, who were handed a two-year ban last week for cheating, are the only Kenyan school to have won the boys' football crown during the championship's first edition in Nakuru in 2002.

"We have good teams this year and I believe they have what it takes to win back the team title which we lost last year," said Kenya Secondary Schools Sports Association secretary-general David Ngugi.

The Kenyan team will be flagged off by government officials tomorrow in Nairobi ahead of their departure next week Tuesday.

Las Vegas

Unbeaten welterweight world champion Floyd Mayweather (left) will try to match the iconic 49-0 career record of Rocky Marciano against fellow American Andre Berto on September 12, promoters announced Tuesday.

In what Mayweather claims might be his final fight, and what is the last bout on his rich six-fight Showtime television deal, the reigning World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council champion will risk his crowns against a two-time world champion who has lost three of his past six fights.

"I'm ready to get back in the ring on September 12 and prove again to the whole world why I'm 'The Best Ever,'" Mayweather said. "I always bring my A-game and this fight against Andre Berto is no exception. He's a young, strong fighter who is hungry to take down the best — 48 have tried before and on September 12, I'm going to make it 49."

Berto, 30-3 with 23 knockouts, intends to flip the script on Mayweather, whose 48-0 record includes 26 knockouts.

"I'm coming to kick Floyd's ass," Berto said. "Best believe I plan to bring it to Floyd and I'm not concerned about what 48 other fighters have been unable to do. Somebody is getting knocked out and it won't be me." (AFP)

We are focused on the World Championships, athletes say

clagat@ke.nationmedia.com

The doping report linking the country with widespread doping will not derail Kenyan athletes' preparations for the forthcoming 2015 IAAF World Championships in Beijing.

British newspaper The Sunday Times published data from 5,000 athletes, which it claimed revealed an "extraordinary extent of cheating" with Kenyan and Russian athletes adversely mentioned. The report claims that some chemists in the North Rift athletics hubs of Iten and Eldoret administer EPO and other banned performance boosters. But top athletes led by former World Marathon record holder Wilson Kipsang (inset) have said the report will not affect Kenya's preparations for the World Championships due from August 22 to 30 in Beijing where Kenya will be represented by 47 athletes.

"Those are just allegations which should not scare our athletes. We will continue with our preparation for the World Championships," Kipsang said at the University of Eldoret grounds early this week.

Kipsang, the 2012 Olympic Games marathon bronze medalist, is part of the Kenyan team to Beijing.

Fast rising marathoner Eliud Kipchoge, who is the reigning Chicago Marathon champion, said the report will not dampen the team's spirit, pointing out that they are mere allegations.

"The allegations would only affect the Kenyan preparation for Beijing if athletes in the team were mentioned," Kipchoge, the former 5,000m World Champion said. The reigning New York Marathon champion also said he report shouldn't form a basis to doubt the past performance of Kenyan athletes.

"We want to tell the world that Kenyan athletes are tested regularly, so trust our performances because we have run a lot of races where collected samples return negative results." Kipsang, who is the Professional Athletes Association of Kenya president, stressed the need for Athletics Kenya to take the anti-doping campaigns to the grassroots to create awareness on doping.

Coe downplays doping claims

IAAF boss now comes out fighting to protect sport's reputation over latest doping scandal

BY PAUL REDFERN
sportsdesk@le.nationmedia.com

Former UK Olympic champion Sebastian Coe an IAAF vice president, has condemned the witch-hunt against athletes in Kenya and elsewhere over doping allegations made by a German TV company and the Sunday Times newspaper over the weekend.

Lord Coe, a former UK MP defended the IAAF's drug-testing system and said it was time to protect the reputation of the sport. The former champion Olympic middle distance runner described allegations of widespread doping in athletics as a "declaration of war" and says it is time to "come out fighting" to protect the sport's reputation.

Kenya's Olympic and world-championships medals between 2001 and 2012 were won by athletes with suspicious blood-test results. On Saturday ARD/WDR aired a documentary in which a hidden camera purportedly showed Kenyan athletes being injected with performance-enhancing drugs. ARD also alleged corruption among Kenyan officials who it said wanted to cover up the doping.

Reports also pointed out that while dozens of Kenyans have failed drugs tests in the last two years, only Rita Jeptoo, winner of the Boston and Chicago marathons, could be categorized as a top-level runner. Others have mostly been lesser-known athletes. Athletics' world governing body, the IAAF, said the blood results were not positive tests or proof of doping. The allegations, according to the IAAF were not new but were obtained from data it had released some time ago. In a statement released on Tuesday, the IAAF "refuted outright" any allegation it did not appropriately follow up suspicious profiles.

"The use of that database, however it got into their possession, displayed either breathtaking ignorance or a level of malevolence around a set of readings you simply cannot extrapolate beyond," Coe, who is standing in the IAAF presidential election on 19 August, added.

"The idea that my sport sat there either covering up wrongdoing or just being incompetent could not be wider of the mark...Nobody should underestimate the anger at the way our sport has been portrayed."

The IAAF says it has a commission of three independent experts who have tested and checked thousands of blood samples. Lord Coe also said that since 2011, the IAAF has pursued 63 cases based on the biological passport programme, with 39 athletes sanctioned. Coe was speaking on the same day the IAAF issued a statement defending its procedures and calling last weekend's media allegations "sensationalist and confusing."

However, other reports suggest that some of the claims maybe true and Boston marathon winner Rito Jeptoo is reported to have said Kenyan athletes are not subjected to blood tests while training. Another Kenyan runner is also alleged to have said that the national federation suppresses positive doping results in return for bribes.

Beijing is perfect stage for Kenyan sprinters to shine

As the country prepares to go to war with the rest of the globe at the World athletics Championships in Beijing later this month, I must say

I am elated with the enthusiasm and spirit emerging within the sprinting circles.

I am not very much worried with the mid and long distance because I know we have been there, we have done that. My focus is on the country's new born baby 'sprints' which in my view, is growing up fast.

Perhaps for the first time in years, there was a lot of focus on short races during trials unlike in the past where the fans have concentrated on the mid and long distance races. Even the media, who have in the past ignored the shorts races, were all over the sprinters after the races amid all kind of interviews.

Is this the turning point in sprints? I am not sure and only time will tell! But the truth of the matter is that the country is on the right course in as far as sprints are concerned. Newly-crowned national 100m record holder Mike Mokamba is in the shape of his life and even a well-drilled US-based Carvin Nkanata no match for him in the 200m. Mokamba, 20, recently lowered Tom Musinde's 100m record 10.26 to set a new one of 10.23 during the national championships last month and believes he can still bring it further down. Mokamba, who is a son to former sprinter Elkana Nyan-gau, is no doubt part of the current generation, that believes they can take sprints in Kenya to another level.

Mokamba is, apparently the unofficial Kenyan fastest 200m runner at 20.50sec but the time is not recognized since it was hand-timed, against the IAAF regulations. He will still represent Kenya in the 200m with Nkanata Mokamba's training mate Alphas Kishoyian, who has defied all odds to remain top in the 400m locally, is the other sprinter to watch. His 44.75sec is well within the required standards but Kishoyian will be seeking to improve it further in Beijing. His time is rated the 15th fastest in the world and this gives him hopes that Beijing could be a revelation.

He is the sole Kenyan representative in the men's 400m in Beijing. Kenya will also have representation in the women's sprints with Maureen Jelagat and Joyce Zakari flying the country's flag in 400m. It's unfortunate that we do not have a team in the relays but I guess having five sprinters in Beijing is not a bad start for a country that wants to diversify from mid and long distance. It will also be interesting to see how things pan out in the 800m especially in the men's category.

After beating world record holder David Rudisha, the world will be waiting to see how Ferguson Rotich will perform at the next level. In the women's category we are all counting on world champion Eunice Sum to make a repeat performance with the assistance of long-time friend and training partner Janeth Jepkosgei.

On the emerging doping allegations, I must say this is no time to pass the buck but instead, a time to unite as a country to fight the menace.

KVF to field strong squad at Volleyball World Cup

BY DAVID KWALIMWA
dkwalimwa@ke.nationmedia.com

The Kenya Volleyball Federation has confirmed it will send its strongest team to compete at the FIVB World Cup in Japan. This development effectively ends a three week impasse between the sports body and a section of the national team players who have been on record expressing their wish to compete at the All Africa Games set for Brazzaville in September.

“We are sending our “A” team to Japan with the hope that they will compete well against the top volleyball nations in the world,” KVF chairman Waithaka Kioni (left) said yesterday. “The players are in good form as you saw during the FIVB Grand Prix last month. We have already written to the Ministry of Sports, requesting them to pay similar allowances to the two teams for the two events.” The team for the World Cup, led by coach David Lung’aho and his assistant Japheth Munala, will leave the country on August 13, for a week long training camp in Japan ahead of the competition that begins on August 22. Another squad consisting reserve and upcoming players will represent the country at the All Africa Games next month. This team is led by veteran trainer Paul Gitau assisted by Esther Jepkosgei. KVF is, in the meantime, planning a thanksgiving dinner-cum-fundraiser, whose proceeds will be channeled towards supporting the teams in these two competition.

Kenyan golfers begin Zimbabwe event brilliantly

BY LARRY NGALA
lngala@ke.nationmedia.com

Defending champions Kenya started their Gilbertson and Page Trophy title defence well, picking up a total of 21 points in the first Test Match, to lead hosts Zimbabwe by one point at the Borrowdale Brooks Golf Club course in Harare Zimbabwe on Tuesday.

This was despite Kenya’s top seeded player Naomi Wafula and Agnes Nyakio losing their matches to both Zimbabwe and Zambia.

However the pair of team captain Christina Andersen and Kellie Gachaga beat Zambia though lost against Zimbabwe while Joyce Wanjiru and Mercy Nyanchama won against Zambia and halved with Zimbabwe for five points.

However, in the afternoon singles Kenya managed to collect 16 points after winning four out of six matches, same as Zimbabwe while Zambia managed 13 points. Yesterday, was a practising day at Chapman Golf Club course where the second Test Match will take place this morning. Other members of the Kenyan team are Kellie Gachaga and Rachel Chebukati.

The Kenyan girls will meanwhile take part in the 2015 Zimbabwe Ladies Open Stroke-play Championship to be held over the weekend at Chapman.

The Gilbertson and Page Trophy, (G & P), a triangular event between Kenya, Zimbabwe and Zambia in 1969 first between Zambia and a combined East African Team until Zimbabwe joined in 1983 after its independence in 1980.

It became biennial in 1991. Kenya won the trophy in 2007 was to defend the title in 2009 in Zimbabwe where the event was cancelled at the last minute.

It was held later in Lusaka Zambia in 2011 where Kenya retained the trophy and successfully defended it in 2013 when it was staged at Karen Country Club and Muthaiga respectively.

Meanwhile, home player Kibugu Mutahi was leading by two shots after two rounds of the 2015 Kenya Junior Stroke-play Championship at the par 71 Muthaiga Golf Club course on Tuesday. Mutahi shot 74 and 76 to finish two shots better than Nyal’s Agil Is-Haq who combined 78 and 74. Another Nyal player Tahir Mohammed was next on 80 and 79 while Thika’s Brian Omondi posted 79 and 80 to lead Adel Balala of Nyal and Thika’s Simon Ngugi who fired 77 and 83 and 79 and 84. Action was still on at the time of going to press with Mutahi in the lead.

Elsewhere, Steve Stricker was named an assistant captain for the United States’ Presidents Cup team with barely a month remaining in qualifying for the October showdown in South Korea. Stricker will join Fred Couples and Davis Love as assistants to US captain Jay Haas as the Americans try to retain the trophy against an Internationals squad from outside Europe as the Ryder Cup-style event makes its Asian debut on October 8-11.

KCB RALLY | Tough contest also shaping up in the navigators’ championship quest

Foreign drivers storm Machakos

Finland’s Laukkanen, Uganda’s Mangat out to give locals a rough time on the road

BY ABDUL SIDI
abdulsidi2@gmail.com

Finish national Tapio Laukkanen will be one of the foreign drivers to watch out for when the 2015 KCB Kenya National Rally Championship resumes with the Machakos leg this weekend. Laukkanen, driving a Subaru Impreza, has made life very difficult for the local aces as the competition for the overall title continues to shape up. The Finn has so far won two out of the last five rounds of the series. However, mechanical problems sidelined him in the Safari Rally, while another one slowed him down in the Mombasa Rally where he finished in the eighth place.

Reduce the gap
Though the Finn looks to continue with his winning ways in the Machakos Rally, he has a fight on his hand to reduce the gap of 55.5 points over Jassi Chatthe in the overall standings with a maximum of another 75 points to score from the three remaining rounds beginning with the Machakos event.

Former Ugandan champion Jas Mangat has also proved a challenge to many local drivers following his victory in the Eldoret Rally. He is currently lying fourth in the overall standings with 60 points and with a remote chance of becoming the first ever Ugandan to win the Kenyan title if luck stay on his side.

Former National, Safari Rally and East African Safari Classic Rally champion, Ian Duncan, with 74.5 points, is 39 points adrift of Chatthe in the second place followed by current title holder Baldev Chager with Jas Mangat, navigated by Imran Khan, in their Mitsubishi EVO10 during the Voi Rally. Mangat has proved a challenge to local drivers with his best result in the Eldoret Rally where he finished third. He is lying fourth in the overall standings.

64.5 while both Mangat and Onkar Rai share third place with 60 points. A fierce battle is also expected in the Navigators Championship where the “eyes and brains” of the team have to score each every vital point to try and grab the crown at the end of the season. Three out of the top six navigators have already tasted victory as national champions while four among them have won the most prestigious round of the Safari Rally. The latest winner of the Safari Rally, Gugu Panesar, leads the table with 105.5 followed by Ravi Soni with 73.5, Tim Jessop in the (sixth) (42) and Amaar Slatch (sixth) with 31.5. KCB Machakos Rally will be flagged off with a ceremonial start from the KCB Machakos branch at 7am on Saturday before the competing crews tackle competitive stages in the surrounding area, totaling 290km.

Vet Lab professional Njoroge appointed to top KGU position

The Kenya Golf Union (KGU) yesterday announced the appointment of Vet Lab Sports Club professional Brian Njoroge as the Golf development officer effective August 1 this year. Njoroge, a graduate of Southern University Baton Rouge Louisiana and alumni of Peninsula College, Seattle Washington, apart from being one of the leading professional golfers in the country, is also a Level One South Africa PGA Accredited coach. He turned professional in 2006 while playing off plus three handicap and having clinched the KGU Golfer of The Year Award in 2005. He has since won eight professional events. A few years ago Njoroge worked as the resident Golf Professional and Golf, Membership and Leisure Manager of Windsor

Golf Hotel and Country Club. He represented Kenya in international events both as a junior and a senior player. Announcing the appointment of Njoroge, the KGU chairman, Anthony Muhoro, said: “Kenya Golf Union is looking at ways of transforming the game of golf in this country and the appointment of the Golf Development officer is among the strategies that we are using. The appointment will go a long way in establishing golf machinani, one of the Union’s major initiatives this year.” The appointment of GDO is a major milestone towards golf transformational agenda in the country and, through Njoroge, the union will be identifying and partnering with local interest groups to introduce golf to individuals that may not have access to golf. The focus will be to show that golf is not as exclusive and expensive as many people may believe.

Wanyama pushing for better deal to stay at Southampton

dkwalimwa@ke.nationmedia.com

Harambee Stars captain Victor Wanyama will request for a substantial increase to his current wages if he is to consider renewing his contract at Southampton.

Reports in the English media suggest the midfielder will be approached by his employer with an offer to extend his stay in England beyond the remaining two years of his contract.

The player's father, Noah Wanyama, yesterday indicated to Daily Nation Sport that the player was happy at his current club.

"From what I have seen on the pitch plus our private conversation, I believe he is happy at Southampton. If they give him an enticing offer he will for sure consider it, just like I am sure he will consider an offer from a club playing in the Uefa Champions League," Wanyama senior, a former Kenyan international, said.

Wanyama, who currently earns Sh10 million-a-week, has been an instrumental player for Southampton since joining from Celtic in a reported Sh2 billion move two years ago.

His impressive

displays have in the past led to reported interest from his services from Tottenham Hotspur - a club currently handled by the player's former manager Mauricio Pochettino, as well as Arsenal, Manchester United and Italian outfit Fiorentina.

The 24-year-old is expected to play a key role for Ronald Koeman's side this term, in the wake of the recent departures of two key players Nathaniel Clyne and Morgan Schneiderlen to Liverpool and Manchester United respectively.

Mariga, Oliech set for Stars comeback in crucial African Nations Cup qualifier

BY ISAAC SWILA
iswila@ke.nationmedia.com

Former Harambee Stars captain Dennis Oliech and veteran midfielder MacDonald Mariga are set to make a shock comeback to the national team, Daily Nation Sport has learnt.

The two had been overlooked by coach Bobby Williamson since he took over from Algerian-born Belgian Adel Amrouche late last year, but letters seen by this paper show that they have been recalled for the September 6 Africa Cup of Nations qualifier against Zambia in Nairobi.

The two are currently club-less but Daily Nation Sport understands that the Scot wants to have experience in his squad as he gears up for the fixture.

Football Kenya Federation last month dispatched letters to the two, informing them of the coach's desire to have them for the crucial assignment against the Chipolopolo.

Alongside Stars skipper Victor Wanyama, these are Kenya's most decorated footballers.

Stars began their 2017

Afcon journey on a positive note, earning an impressive 1-1 draw against Congo away on June 14, and the Scot is keen to have his young squad benefit from the experience of the two during the qualification journey in a group that also includes Guinea Bissau.

However, in a phone interview from Scotland where he is currently on holiday, Williamson could neither confirm nor deny whether he has recalled the duo.

"Why are you just concerned about the two? You should be asking about the whole squad. Just be patient until the squad is released. All we want is a good campaign," Williamson said.

"The aim, of course, is to win against Zambia and it means we have to prepare well."

Oliech made history when he became the first Kenyan to play in the French Ligue 1 with FC Nantes in 2005 and has been Stars' stop scorer in the last decade.

Mariga, on the other hand, inscribed his name in Kenya's football history books when became the first Kenyan to win the lucrative Uefa Champions League trophy with Inter Milan in 2010 after joining the Nerazzurri from Parma in January that year.

That memorable season also saw him bag the Italian Serie A and the Coppa Italia under current Chelsea manager Jose Mourinho.

When he made his decision not to have Oliech in his squad last year, Williamson said: He (Oliech) has done a lot for the country. Everybody appreciates that but it's a high time we found the next generation of players and that is what I'm working on."

Ajax dumped out of Champions League

Four-time European champions Ajax have been eliminated at the third qualifying round stage of the Champions League after a humiliating 3-2 second-leg defeat at Rapid Vienna on Tuesday as Monaco advanced with a 4-0 win over Swiss side Young Boys.

After a 2-2 first-leg draw in the Austrian capital last week, Ajax were strong favourites to progress to the play-off round, but they suffered a torturous night at the Amsterdam Arena. Frank de Boer's men let a two-goal lead slip at the Ersnt-Happel Stadion last week and the visitors started where they left off last week.

Mali star Sako leaves Wolves for Palace

Malian forward Bakary Sako has joined Crystal Palace on a three-year deal after his contract with Wolverhampton Wanderers expired, the Premier League club announced yesterday.

Sako, 27, joined Wolves from Saint-Etienne in 2012 and scored 36 goals in 118 league appearances for the club, starring as they won the English third-tier title in 2013-14.

He followed that up with 15 goals last season as the Midlands club narrowly missed out on a place in the Championship play-offs. Sako said that Palace manager Alan Pardew had played a key role in his decision to move to Selhurst Park.

CSKA punished after fans chase Israeli side

Troubled Bulgarian greats CSKA Sofia will play three home games with two stands closed after its fans chased Israeli side Ashdod off the pitch in a friendly, the football union said yesterday.

The incident occurred in the last seconds of a pre-season home game last Sunday with Ashdod 0-1 up despite three of its players being sent off. Angered by aggressive play by the Ashdod players, CSKA fans threw bottles and stormed the pitch, prompting the Israeli players to flee into empty stands for safety.

There were no suggestions that the incident was sparked by anti-Semitism.

Sporting Lisbon pull out of Boateng deal

Sporting Lisbon have pulled out of a deal to sign Kevin Prince Boateng following a disagreement about the Ghana international's image rights, the Portuguese club announced yesterday.

Sporting said that "after negotiations with Kevin-Prince Boateng, it was not possible to reach an agreement relating to his image rights."

A few hours earlier, Portuguese media reported that the deal had hit a stumbling block because Boateng had failed a medical.

The 28-year-old, who was born in Germany and has spent the last two seasons at Schalke 04, had appeared set to sign a two-year contract at the Estadio Jose Alvalade, according to local press reports.

Argentina winger Di Maria 'delighted' with PSG move

London

Argentina winger Angel Di Maria (right) said he is "delighted" to be joining French champions Paris-Saint Germain in an interview screened on BeIn Sports yesterday.

The 27-year-old has yet to officially sign for the Qatari-backed Parisians ahead of a move from Manchester United. But in an interview with BeIn Sports, who are owned by the same Qatari Sports Investments group that includes PSG in its portfolio, Di Maria spoke of his joy at securing a move to the big-spending outfit.

"I'm delighted to sign for PSG because the club has done everything to bring me here," said Di Maria, who passed a medical in Doha on Tuesday.

"I'll try to do my best, I'll work hard to give my utmost and if everything goes well, we'll win a lot of trophies."

The former Real Madrid star said his goal was to bring more than just domestic glory to last year's French treble-winners. "Paris won all the trophies in France and that's important for such a big club. "My aim is to help Paris get past the Champions League quarter-finals."

PSG have been knocked out in the Champions League quarter-finals the last three years (twice by Barcelona and once by Chelsea) and their best result in Europe's premier club competition remains a semi-final appearance in 1995.

Di Maria's arrival will be PSG's biggest in the current off-season following those of German goalkeeper Kevin Trapp from Eintracht Frankfurt and French midfielder Benjamin Stambouli from Tottenham. (AFP)

FOOTBALL | LVG pledges to revert to the 4-3-3 system that brought success in the 2014-15 campaign

United look for winning balance

London

After returning to the Premier League's top four, Manchester United have once again recruited extensively, but there are concerns about the balance of their squad ahead of the new season.

Manager Louis van Gaal has spent around $120 million, notably bolstering his midfield with the additions of Bastian Schweinsteiger and Morgan Schneiderlin, to take his spending since succeeding David Moyes last year to around £230 million.

With Robin van Persie and Radamel Falcao having left and Javier Hernandez out of favour, it leaves Wayne Rooney shouldering a heavy burden up front, but former captain Bryan Robson believes the midfield reinforcements can provide the platform for a first sustained title assault since Alex Ferguson's departure in 2013.

"The manager has built the midfield area to a point where we look strong enough to dictate the tempo of games," said Robson, now a club ambassador.

"Schweinsteiger and Schneiderlin look really good signings. They are going to be the powerhouse of United's midfield and that should hold us in good stead over the season."

United fans raised on the all-action displays of players like Robson and Manchester United's Memphis Depay celebrates scoring against San Jose Earthquakes during their International Champions Cup match on July 21.

Roy Keane have long lamented the lack of oomph in the team's midfield, but if anything, the club now have too many midfielders on their hands. United, who finished fourth last season, deployed a 4-2-3-1 formation in pre-season, but van Gaal has pledged to revert to the 4-3-3 system that belatedly brought the team success in the latter part of the 2014-15 campaign.

It means that Schweinsteiger, Schneiderlin, Michael Carrick, Ander Herrera and Marouane Fellaini (who is suspended for the first three league games) will be competing for only three starting berths.

With the exciting Memphis Depay, a £25 million acquisition from PSV Eindhoven, expected to start on one flank, Ashley Young, Juan Mata, Antonio Valencia and Adnan Januzaj — and potentially reported target Pedro Rodriguez — must vie for a place on the other side of the pitch.

Streamlining process

A new £750 million kit deal with Adidas having taken effect on August 1, money is now even less of an object for English's long-time richest club, hence the hit they were willing to take in offloading Angel di Maria just a year after his record £59.7 million arrival from Real Madrid.

The Argentine's departure is part of a streamlining process that has also seen Nani, Tom Cleverley and Rafael da Silva pass through the exit door.

Irked by United's gruelling travelling arrangements on their 2014 tour of the United States, van Gaal took a firm grip on this year's trip Stateside, keeping journeys to a strict minimum.

A pair of training camps allowed him to drill his players on the team's shape and make adjustments in defence, with Daley Blind moved to centre-back. (AFP)

New boys in the top-flight Bournemouth enjoy rags-to-riches rise

London

Just seven years after coming within hours of going out of business, Bournemouth will complete a remarkable rags-to-riches rise when they kick off their first Premier League campaign this weekend.

For decades, genteel Bournemouth was known primarily as one of the most popular retirement spots on England's south coast and the lethargic efforts of the local football team were in keeping with that sedentary image.

The malaise was so profound that Bournemouth came close to going into liquidation on three occasions in 2008 as the club languished in obscurity near the bottom of English football's fourth tier.

But like the area itself, whose tourist board now boasts of "a vibrant, cosmopolitan town with a buzzing nightlife", Bournemouth underwent a face-lift thanks to the inspired management of Eddie Howe and the subsequent investment of Russian benefactor Maxim Demin, whose petrochemical fortune has bankrolled the club since 2011.

With a stadium seating only 11,700, the Cherries are by far the smallest team in the top tier, mak-

Cautious tactics

However, the highly regarded Howe, who secured Bournemouth's promotion to the second tier in 2013 and then led them into the Premier League as surprise Championship winners in May, has no intention of resting on his laurels and has spent the close season analysing how clubs of similar stature have fared in their first seasons. That research showed the 37-year-old that Barnsley, Blackpool and Swindon Town, all relegated after one season, reached the Premier League playing an attacking style that was brutally exposed against higher quality opposition.

With that in mind, Howe has been trying to follow the example set by Swansea City, whose swashbuckling promotion in 2011 was followed by a subtle switch to more cautious tactics and careful transfer dealings that have allowed the club to punch above their weight. "We have analysed a lot of the clubs that have got promoted and what they have done and how they have gone about their work," Howe said. (AFP)

GRAFT WAR | President wants MPs to amend contentious clauses

Vet EACC staff afresh, says Uhuru

President proposes that screening be done within a year, with officials who fail the scrutiny sacked

BY PETER LEFTIE
pmutibo@ke.nationmedia.com
AND JOHN NGIRACHU
jngirachu@ke.nationmedia.com

President Kenyatta wants all anti-corruption commission staff vetted afresh.

In a memorandum to the National Assembly explaining his reasons for refusing to assent to a Bill that seeks to remove commission bosses Hala-khe Waqo and Michael Mubea, the President proposes that the fresh vetting take place within a year.

The Ethics and Anti-Corruption Commission (EACC) officials who do not pass the vetting process should be sacked, the President proposes.

"The services of any person who fails to meet the vetting criteria established by the commission under this section shall be terminated in accordance with the contract of employment," he notes.

In the memorandum to MPs tabled in the National Assembly yesterday by Deputy Speaker Joyce Laboso, President Kenyatta argues that it is unfair and unconstitutional to send Mr Waqo and Mr Mubea packing without subjecting them to a fair hearing.

He instead proposes that MPs amend the 2015 Ethics and Anti-Corruption Commission (Amendment) Bill to insulate all EACC employees against job loss once it becomes law.

The President maintains that the clause seeking the removal of Mr Waqo and Mr Mubea contravenes Section 17(2) of the EACC Act, which requires the commission to inform the secretary in writing of the reasons for his sacking.

The clause further requires that the secretary must be given an opportunity to respond to any accusations levelled against him before any disciplinary action can be taken against him.

"The proposed provision is contrary to Article 47 of the Constitution which confers on all persons the right to administrative action which is expeditious, efficient, lawful and procedurally fair," the President says.

He urges MPs to amend the clause by deleting the section seeking Mr Waqo and Mr Mubea's removal and replace it with one stating that any EACC employee continues serving in accordance with their contracts.

The services of any person who fails to meet the vetting criteria... shall be terminated in accordance with the contract of employment”

President Kenyatta

Dr Laboso

His memorandum comes almost a month after MPs voted 70-39 to kick out Mr Waqo and Mr Mubea.

Originally, the Bill moved by the Justice and Legal Affairs Committee aimed at increasing the number of EACC commissioners and making them serve part-time.

President Kenyatta also took issue with the mechanisms provided by the Bill for appointing EACC commissioners. The Bill proposes that where a vacancy arises in the membership of the commission, the Public Service Commission shall shortlist three qualified applicants for each vacancy and forward their names to the President for appointment.

President Kenyatta notes that the clause contravenes Section 6 of the Act, which provides that commissioners should be appointed by a selection panel.

RATES

Land owners in Nairobi owe City Hall Sh96 billion in land rates, a report by auditor general Edward Ouko shows. The report for the year ended June 2014, shows that the amount rose from Sh64 billion a year earlier (a 49 per cent increase). The amount comprises both the accumulated land rates and penalties which are levied at three per cent of the outstanding amount every month. The growth in the amounts shows an unwillingness by property owners in the capital city to pay rates or take advantage of amnesties granted by the county.

GSU LAND

Auditor-General Edward Ouko wants Moi-era officials from the Internal Security ministry charged for the loss of Sh2.4 billion in a fraudulent purchase of 37.4 acres of land for the GSU in Ruaraka. The government officials in 1988 purchased 196 housing units constructed on 17.8 from the defunct Kenya Posts & Telecommunications Corporation (KPTC) at a cost of Sh64 million. But in later court battles, it was declared that the units and the land were owned by Afrison Export Import Ltd, which has already been paid Sh1.8 billion in compensation.

The 17.8 acres on which the houses sit was part of a larger 96-acre piece of land. The remaining 78.2 acres was also being contested by many developers who claimed that they had been allocated allotment letters by the City Council of Nairobi, resulting in violent scenes next to the GSU.

In 2006, the then Commandant of the GSU hived off an additional 19.5 acres which was to be bought from the official receiver or the registered proprietors in order to keep private developers away from the GSU, Mr Ouko added.

Inside Baps, Nairobi's most iconic temple

When a small man named Ishwarlal Bhai Patel was tasked with the rather ungodly job of putting up a worship house on a swampy area, he rubbed his hands in glee and engaged the overdrive gear of his structural engineering background. The result was a building that is celebrated in Nairobi and beyond as an architectural masterpiece

BY VERAH OKEYO

There is a road called Forest Road in Nairobi, which runs from Limuru Road to the Pangani intersection with Thika Road. There used to be a forest here when they named the road, but that is no more; the trees have been cut down to pave way for mankind's ravenous appetite for shelter.

There is a temple on this road, which stands majestically on the left side as you head towards Pangani. There was a time when people loved detail in architecture, and this temple, named Bochasanwasi Akshar Purshottam Swaminarayan, or just Baps, is from that golden era.

There is a man who lives a few kilometres away from here, in Westlands. There was a time he was Nairobi's best known structural engineer, and Baps is but just one of his footprints in the capital, and indeed in the country.

That man is Ishwarlal Bhai Patel, or simply IB Patel, a senior partner at Mangat, IB Patel and Partners.

Now aged 82, IB started working as a structural engineer in 1954, after completing university education in the US. Since then, he has been one of the most decorated engineers in Kenya, courtesy of the many projects he has helped design and build.

From his office in Upper Hill, Nairobi, he has the daily pleasure of walking to the window and beholding the majesty of his work downtown. He cannot see Baps from here, but there are many other buildings that boast his characteristic touch in the city, including Lonrho House, I&M Building, and Rahimtulla Towers.

IB also designed the Jain Temple in Nairobi in 1993, the Hare Krishan Temple a year later, and the Holy Family Basilica cathedral almost four decades earlier, in the early 1960s. Outside Nairobi, he was involved in the construction of Egerton University in Nakuru, as well as the State lodges in Sagana and Kakamega.

He is unwilling to say which of his handiwork is his most favourite — replying cheekily that “they are all my babies, I love them equally” — but Baps, in a way, stands out when placed alongside his other works, not for its height, or plinth area, or natural blend, but the magnificent attention to detail.

As if to cement that fact, Baps today is a tourist site, attracting as much as 500 tourists on a good day. In 2000, IB was awarded by the Architectural Association of Kenya for his work on the temple.

It is easy, even for a novice, to see why Baps is an engineering masterpiece. For once, IB somehow managed to place an 890-tonne dome at the top of the temple. For a structure anchored on loose red soil, that is the same as managing to balance the weight of 180 elephants atop Baps.

The temple is anchored on 10,000 square feet of intrinsically carved wood that is treated to withstand two hours of fire. The wood, sourced from Kenya's best oak, teak and mahogany forests, was first shipped to India, where artists carved over 6,500 little flowers on it before returning it back to Forest Road.

FYI

The BAPS Swaminarayan sect is an offshoot of the Hindu religion that traces its roots to Gujarat in the first half of the 19th century. It adheres to the life teachings of its founding guru, Swaminarayan. The difference between Swaminarayan and other forms of Hinduism is that its members worship the founder as a manifestation of God. As of 2010, the Baps Swaminarayan community in Kenya constituted “a substantial portion” of the 60,000 followers of the Hindu faith in the country, according to American think tank Pew Forum

Worship hall

Inside the main worshipping hall are plastic chairs, on one side for men, and on the other for women — a deliberate arrangement that, Mahendra explains, allows the genders to sit separately so that they can “focus on worshipping at that moment”. The efforts to keep the genders apart, however, are not as strict as in a mosque. The first thing you notice about the hall, however, is not the seating arrangement, but how unlike a place of worship it is: it can pass for a conference venue, judging from the state-of-the-art media and public address systems. Or a leisure centre, because of the large windows that allow gusts of wind to flow in. The beauty of the room is enhanced by the statues of carved marble hanging slightly above eye level.

KENGEN

KenGen Staff Retirement Benefits has put up a high-end housing estate in the Rosslyn suburb, Nairobi County, of 17 four-bedroom units priced as it targets the nearby diplomatic zone.

The housing units are priced at between Sh79.9 million and Sh83.5 million.

The estate is targeted at homebuyers looking to live in areas not far from the city but sparsely populated.

The Sh1.3 billion gated community development is the latest among pension funds diversifying into real estate. Kenya Power Pension Fund is developing high-end properties through its real estate company, Sakile Properties. Sakile has developed Loresho Ridge, Runda Park and Bogani Park.

OFFICES

Corporates in Nairobi are warming up to fractional purchase of office blocks even as concerns linger over the long term maintenance of the buildings.

Fractional purchase is the purchase of a section of a property.

A new report by realtors Mentor Management Ltd says that 560,000 square feet of office space was sold in the fractional model in 2014 with this figure more than tripling to 1.6 million in the first half of 2015.

Part sales allow tenants to afford space in the costlier Grade A buildings.

But the shared ownership of the properties also raises concerns over the long-term caretaking and maintenance of the buildings.

The average sale price of fractional office space in Nairobi is Sh13,702 per square foot. Waiyaki Way is the most expensive, at an average Sh14,250 while the same goes for 14,243 in Kilimani and on Ngong Road.

The developments and prices in these areas are being driven by demand from organisations looking to shift their offices from the crowded central business district to outlying areas.

Assembly hall

Two stairs above the dining space is the assembly hall; the room where the few members who embrace a life of servitude gather frequently for guidance. The impeccable cleanliness, the foods cooked in the kitchen for visitors, the maintenance of the temple and its grounds, are all done by volunteers.

Waiting room

From the plastic seats, one is ushered into a waiting room whose main focus is a chocolate wooden door. The wonder of the door rests on the view from the outside: on it are more than 200 carved flowers that are attached on the larger wooden frame. Despite its size and weight, the door is not hinged on the frame using steel. Instead, the traditional mortise-and-tenon joint is applied. As a contrast on the solid wood are brass handles.

A streak of good luck

The architecture is as attractive as the story behind the duration of its construction. At the time when the community was thinking of putting up a temple here, retired president Daniel arap Moi was also thinking of a place to put up an eye clinic. The grounds on which the temple rests were a swampy, virgin terrain, and Moi felt they could offer a nice siting for his little project. Coincidentally, around the same time, investors put up another eye clinic a few kilometres away, in Loresho, much to the delight of Mahendra. Moi therefore changed his plans and donated the land to the Swaminarayan community. To top their streak of good luck, Trust Bank offered to fund the construction. Construction, though, was not smooth sailing, as they had to divert a river and power lines, the latter which cost them Sh6 million, says Mahendra. The building was constructed to the scale of ancient temples — 160 feet long, 120 wide and 69 high. It also has 40 carved windows and four massive balconies.

Safety first

The ground floor has an expansive, empty hall that acts as “the eating place”, according to the temple’s chairman, 88-year-old Mahendra Bhai Patel (seen here, right, with IB Patel). There, however, are not chairs or tables here, just a glossy carpet of tiles that runs from one extreme to the other. As you walk around, you notice that the columns are round in shape, a conscious preference over ordinary square or rectangular ones for safety. “IB had suggested square pillars and I told him that was not right because the sharp edges of rectangular or square pillars could hurt if one ran into them,” Mahendra explains.

A water vendor in Nakuru. In areas with acute water shortages in many urban areas, people are forced to buy water from such sources.

Pay more if you want assured water supply

Thanks to shortages of the commodity, which has led to rationing in some areas, landlords are charging higher rents for houses where the taps never run dry

BY IMMACULATE WAIRIMU

immawairimu@yahoo.com

When looking for a house, the main factors most people consider are location, affordability, security and the size of the house.

However, thanks to inadequate water supply, which has led to rationing in many urban areas, the availability of water is becoming an increasingly important factor. Indeed, water vendors lugging hand-carts loaded with plastic water containers are now a common sight in many urban estates, and some landlords are even using the availability of water as a selling point for their rental apartments.

"It is becoming increasingly common when looking for a house to rent to find out whether the apartment has water storage tanks even before looking at the house itself," says Celestine Aoko, a mother of two who lives in Roysambu.

Unreliable water supply has become such a nuisance that, regardless of the availability of the other amenities, one does not enjoy living in their house, she adds.

"I live in a relatively spacious, two-bedroom, self-contained house but lack of water has made it uninhabitable. Apartments with sufficient and reliable water supply not only cost more, but are also not easily available. Landlords with apartments that have constant or daily water supply are charging more for them because they know they are high in demand," she offers.

Careful use

She says many families have to store water and use it carefully; often the water used for washing is recycled and used to flush toilets.

The Athi Water Services Board (AWSB), which is charged with expanding the water infrastructure in the country, says the daily demand for water in Nairobi alone is 750,000 cubic metres a day, against a supply capacity of 530,000 cubic metres, leaving a daily deficit of 220,000 cubic metres.

So serious is the issue of water in some places that landlords are reluctant to rent their homes to big families as Silvia Kiriu found out when she went house-hunting recently.

"I learnt from a watchman at an estate in Embakasi I felt was suitable for my family that was also conveniently located near my work place that there was a tenant moving out. Apart from the house being affordable, the estate is conveniently situated a relatively short distance from the main road and has a gate that is manned 24 hours, so I was sure that my children and property would be safe," says the mother of three.

Celestine Aoko, Roysambu resident

Satisfied that it was ideal, she approached the tenant, who not only confirmed that she was, indeed moving out, but that there was no other potential tenant as yet.

"When I approached the caretaker, he asked how I would be paying the rent and was satisfied with the answer I gave. He then asked how many people would be occupying the two-bedroom house, and I told him myself, my husband, our three children and the house help, after which he said he would contact me.

"That was the last I heard of him," says Mrs Kiriu. "I later learnt that he had refused to let me have the house because my family would use a lot of water," she says, adding, "I had also chosen that estate because I had found out that it has water every day, unlike the one where I was living, where supply was unreliable."

Her story is corroborated by Martin Otieno, the caretaker at a three-storey apartment in Kahawa West that has consistent water supply. He says he does not allow families with more than two children to rent the apartments.

Excessive use of water

He says families with more than two children, especially toddlers, use up a lot of water as their nappies, clothes, and bed linen have to be washed frequently. Besides, they soil the living room linen and carpet which have to be cleaned regularly. More water is also used to clean the house, prepare food and flush the toilet, adds Mr Otieno.

"I have nothing against families of five or more renting, but providing their daily water needs is just too expensive. I would rather rent out to noisy, young professionals who are on their first job and contend with them coming back late at night, having disruptive house parties and asking them to lower the volume of their loud music everyday," he says.

Tenants with many children also tend to mess the apartments so when they move out, the landlord has to make a lot of repairs before another tenant moves in. The damage to the house is at times so bad that

If you take a look at many of the new buildings in many urban areas in the country today, one thing that is bound to strike you is their glass cladding.

However, experts are warning that, while glass clad buildings might look chic, they are not suitable for our climate. "This aesthetic appeal contributes a lot to energy misuse and raises the operating bills in such buildings," says architect Erastus Omil Abonyo.

"When sunlight hits a glass surface, its rays are transformed into long waves that remain trapped in a room. As a result, the room starts getting hot, necessitating air conditioning to make it comfortable, Mr Abonyo explains, adding, "This should not be the case, because buildings in tropical climates such as Kenya do not really need air conditioning."

"To make matters worse, people using the buildings also produce heat, which makes the situation more uncomfortable, simply because of the glass factor," he says.

"Never have environmentally conscious buildings been more central to the welfare of people than they are now. The glass clad building or skyscraper heats up quickly, and in the process the greenhouse effect is manifested. This makes its interiors a hot, glass furnace which, without air-conditioning, is practically uninhabitable in tropical climates," concurs Musau Kimeu, an architect, environmental design expert and acoustics specialist. "Air-conditioning is not a viable option in the 21st century, considering that it is an established fact that buildings account for more than 50 per cent of all carbon dioxide (CO₂) emissions globally, mainly from air-conditioning. CO₂ is the main cause of global warming and climate change," he adds.

Environmentalists have been advocating for energy-efficient buildings — also known as green buildings — that promote a healthy life, work and a sustainable environment. What is more disturbing, though, says Mr Musau, is that even old buildings that were originally suitable for the local climate are being renovated to incorporate glass cladding.

A case in point is Victor House on Kimathi Street in Nairobi was glass clad in 2014.

"When architecture in tropical countries is considered today, the best buildings were built between 1960 and 1980. This coincided with the independence years of most former colonised nations in the tropics," says Mr Musau.

It can be argued that modern architecture came to East Africa in the 1930s with the arrival of two influential foreign architects. The first was Dr Ernst May, the Vice-President of Congrès Internationaux d'Architecture Moderne, who came to Kenya in 1934. He is credited with designing the Oceanic Hotel in Mombasa, built between 1952 and 1954, Kenwood House in Nairobi (1937), and the Aga Khan Hospital in Kisumu, (1952).

The second was German buildings not good for our climes

A major disadvantage of glass cladding is that when the sun's rays hit the glass, they are transformed into long waves that remain trapped in a room for a long time, making it hot.

Airconditioning is not a viable option in the 21st century, considering that it is an established fact that buildings account for more than 50 per cent of all carbon dioxide emissions globally, mainly from air conditioning. Carbon dioxide is the main cause of global warming and climate change."

modernist Amyas Connell, who came to Kenya in 1947. His designs include Parliament Building in Nairobi (1952), Norwich Union Building, (1959), and the Attorney-General's Chambers (1962).

The two architects laid the foundations for a new style of architecture in East Africa, and subsequent tropic-conscious buildings such as the Kenyatta International Convention Centre (1965 to 1973) ICEA building on Kenyatta Avenue (1982), and Times Tower (1992-1998).

Currently, most skyscrapers in Nairobi fully glass clad, with no provision for shading from the sun, says Mr Musau. Many of these buildings did not take into consideration the effect of the sun on the occupants' health and comfort, or their running charges, he adds.

In view of this trend, Mr Musau says, some questions need to be asked. For instance, are local architects not bothered about the impact glass cladding has on buildings in the local setting or is it that they don't care as long as they earn their professional fees? "Are they so ill-trained that they do not know how to design appropriate buildings for the local climate?" asks Mr Musau.

The year the first influential foreign architect, Dr Ernst May of the Congress International d'Architecture, arrived in Kenya

These glassy buildings, even in Europe from where most of these designs are borrowed, have proved uneconomical, not to mention the ridiculously wasteful cooling loads they require.

Every architect should endeavour not to disturb the environment with what they build, says Mr Musau, adding that the challenge lies in creating a balance between what's in vogue and a responsible, energy-efficient design.

He says architects and developers should work together to combat global warming by developing modernistic, yet environmentally conscious buildings, citing the Coca-Cola Headquarters building in Nairobi's Upper Hill, and the Learning Resource Centre (LRC), at the Catholic University of Eastern Africa, also in Nairobi, as cases in point. Even when it's hot, he notes, the new library at the Catholic University remains cool without air conditioning.

The stones in the basement absorb moisture from the ground and create a cooling effect as it evaporates. The building's large windows and doors are protected from the sun's heat by shades.

However, both architects agree, that does not mean that glass cannot be incorporated in building designs in tropic climates. When glass is used on windows, suggests Mr Abonyo, it should be protected using vertical or horizontal shading from the sun, says Mr Abonyo.

Shading can also be achieved by using long roof overhangs, balconies, perforated timber screens etc., adds Mr Musau.

Also, when orienting buildings, the general rule for the tropics is to have openings on the sides facing north and south.

If possible, have thick walls with no openings on the sides facing east and west. Mr Abonyo says that a thick wall traps in hot air for a longer time, so the trapped heat takes longer to be re-radiated into the building, meaning the building heats up slowly.

He notes that in Mombasa, which is very hot, many buildings are cool inside. Apart from the whitewashed walls that reflect heat, the buildings also have thick walls that trap heat for a longer time, says Mr Abonyo.

Student towns help create economic

@Mossetti
mosetibrian@gmail.com

With more than ten universities and many more set to open their doors to students, Kisii town can very well be referred to as a university town.

Kisii University, Jomo Kenyatta University of Science & Technology, University of Nairobi, Narok University, Moi University, Mount Kenya University, Africa Nazarene University and Jaramogi Oginga Odinga are some of the institutions that have chosen this serene hilly rainy town tucked away south of the Lake Victoria water basin as home.

Kisii University, a public university with its main campus in Kisii has a population of more than 17,000 students. It has five learning centers within the town. Combined the student population in town is more than 30,000.

This sudden influx of young people in town has brought many changes to the town.

To begin with the students have been a well-deserved shot in the arm to Kisii town due to their high spending power. This has caused a considerably raised the standards of living for residents.

However, social issues which come with young people are causing rifts between the society and the student population.

The large and diverse university population may conflict with the locals because most of the considerable age difference when compared to older residents of the town. They also come from diverse backgrounds and subscribe to different cultures.

Dr Henry Onderi the chairman County Education Board and director at Jaramogi Oginga Odinga University argues that the local population has experienced a culture shock.

"These are universities that came up in an area that was predominantly rural. It is the first time the locals are experiencing such a different form of communication, dress and lifestyle that is characteristic with the student population," he says.

There are benefits

He adds: "They should however be viewed positively as they come with a lot of benefits social issues notwithstanding. Employment opportunities, investment opportunities and such are just some of the benefits brought about by universities"

In Europe for instance, a university town is generally characterised by having an old university in the area whose progress is intertwined with the progress of the town. Some of them have morphed into cities like Oxford, Cambridge and Durham.

The economy of such towns is closely related and highly supported by the university structures which may include student societies, business incubators, libraries, sports facilities and hospitals.

Professor Blake Gumprecht, a social geographer and a leading authority on the subject of college towns, describes the American college town as a "unique type of place, shaped by the sometimes conflicting forces of youth, intellect, and idealism." In his book The American College Town, he dissects the intrigues of such a place by handling student related issues in relation to the locals. He argues: "college towns typically create and exert a dominant influence over the character of the town. In essence the institutions spill over to encompass the locals who may be predominantly conservative."

So, does Kisii town have the characteristics to classify it as a university town? Has studentification taken place?

Studentification refers to the act of a growing student population moving in large numbers to traditionally non-student neighborhoods.

Kisii has suffered studentification as the colleges and universities in the town do not house their students. More than half the student population live in private hostels or rented houses off campus and within the town.

Estates like Jogoo which formerly housed mostly Kisii Bottlers Ltd employees is now teeming with students. Just behind Kisii University, Nyamage, a place formerly characterised by Chang'aa dens and crime, a student village has mushroomed up with investors fighting to acquire plots to construct houses for the students.

Professor John Akama the Kisii University Vice chancellor says the locals should accept the changes and move with them.

“One of the mandates of a university is community development, these students contribute to community development and it’s motivating to see young men carrying out projects in their communities,” he says.

He continues, “Students are young and they will of course seek entertainment in clubs and such, in as much as we don’t want our students to be drunks, we cannot stop them from enjoying themselves.”

A section of society however mistrusts the students. This is not farfetched owing to how rowdy students get when they are protesting or worse, rioting.

Elijah Mokaya bitterly remembers the last strike orchestrated by university students that saw him lose property worth hundreds of thousands of shillings.

“Yes sometimes we are afraid of the students, you know they are many and when they attack you, you better comply or they will beat you up. The last strike they broke into my shop and carried stuff away, and I unable to do anything,” he says.

Kisii County deputy governor Joash Maangi has called for understanding between the two factions of society.

He also refute the notion that the people who are engaging in prostitution in town are students as the public has openly accused.

“Just because these young people may not dress decently as per our standards, we the older generation, it does not mean that they are prostitutes,” he says.

“These are people who are only busy for about six hours a day and they have the rest of the time off, so they want to have fun because they have a few shillings sent from their parents they can spend,” he adds.

Kakamega and Maseno towns are among other towns which have transformed because of the presence of universities.

Maseno for instance was set up mainly as a learning center but developed into a town as Maseno University grew.

Housing Finance announces new company after approval

HOUSING FINANCE, AN INTEGRATED property and financial solutions provider, has today announced the establishment of a non-operating holding company, HF Group limited, following approval by the Central Bank of Kenya (CBK).

This new development will result to the transfer of the mortgage finance business of the Company to a new subsidiary, HFC Limited. HFC Limited is licensed to carry on the business of a mortgage finance as well as banking services under the Banking Act.

Following this approval, the board has appointed Mr Frank Ireri as the Group Managing Director, with responsibility to oversee the HF Group subsidiaries.

Mr Sam Waweru (formally Finance and Administration Director) has been appointed as the Managing Director, HFC Limited. The Shareholders of the firm will continue to own the same shares that they owned before the re-organisation and these shares will remain listed on the Nairobi Stock Exchange. Mr. Steve Mainda, the Board Chairman, said the new non-operating holding company will give the stimulus to register further growth.

“The Re-organisation supported by funds from the recent Rights Issue, will give the Group the impetus to register further growth and optimally deliver on its growth strategy,” said Mr. Mainda.

He said the Group holding structure will allow for the management and oversight of the group from an entity that is better positioned to raise capital and channel it to the group’s entities as appropriate.

“This restructuring will also present HF Group with an easier route for acquisition and investment. The non-operating holding company will host the group brand and function as a shared service centre for the subsidiaries,” said Mr Mainda.

Mr Mainda said that plans are underway to embark on a rebranding exercise to support identity of the new group structure.

“The rebranding exercise will be phased over the next few months and will create a strong brand identity for the group and its subsidiaries. The new capability will allow the group to offer banking, financial, property and investment solutions across the value chain. We are no longer a mortgage company; HF Group presents a financial and property powerhouse,” said Mr Mainda.

The Banking Act permits non-operating holding companies approved and regulated by the CBK to own more than 25 per cent of the equity of banks, financial institutions and mortgage finance companies whilst also investing subsidiaries engaged in other businesses, hence the reorganisation.

“The Group has embarked on its Vision 2020 strategic plan and has brought on board multinational management consulting firm, McKinsey, to support the firm’s next phase of growth and progressively enhancing shareholder value,” said Mr Mainda.

I rested on my crutch. "I can't wait to see Mom. And Craig." I was surprised to hear myself say that I wanted to see Craig. But deep in my heart, I really did want to see my little brother, even if he did annoy me sometimes.

Mr. Rayford bustled over to greet everyone. "Praise the Lord!" he said. "Tonight we'll have a special praise service and hear all about how God answered our prayers."

I could see our house beneath the African greenheart tree. My two dogs, Grump and Buckwheat, rushed up the hill barking and yapping. They jumped up, pawing my chest. Mom and Craig ran out the door. "You're back!" my mom shouted and smothered me with a hug.

Craig squirmed his way between Mom's hug and my body and gave me a little boy-sized squeeze. "I missed you, Dean!"

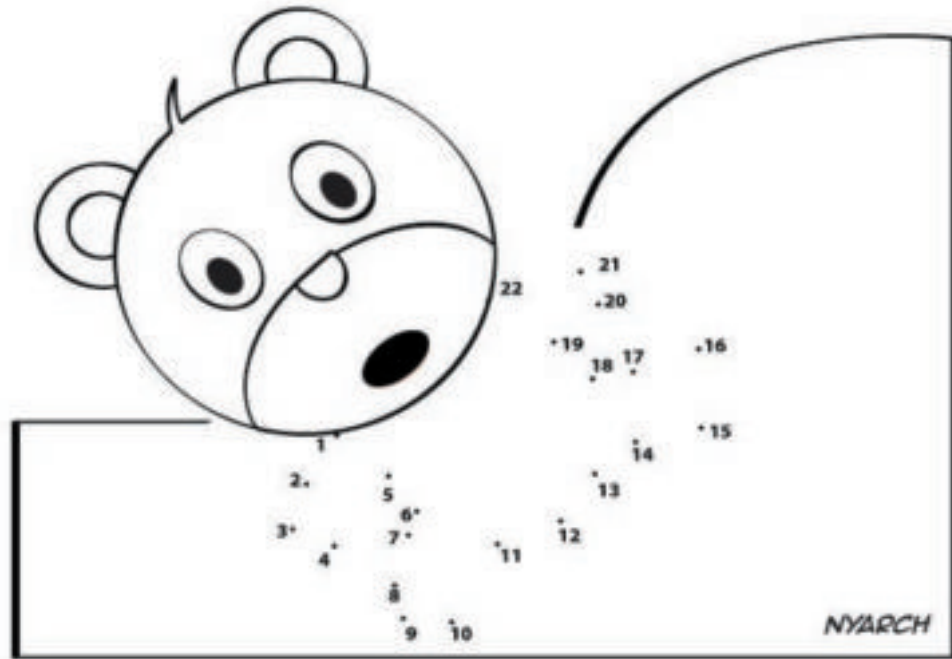

"I missed you too," I said.

Graduation

Theme: Building a Research Culture

Ceremony comes as varsity opens Kenya's first post-independence, state of the art Campus in Turkana County

CHIEF GUEST

Prof. Richard A. Sikora

Head of Soil Ecosystem Phytopathology & Nematology, Institute of Plant Pathology, University of Bonn, Germany

He has maintained an active research and teaching program in nematology, soil microbiology, and biological control. He has also maintained an active international program in these areas throughout his career through student research and consultation in the tropics and subtropics. Nineteen of 57 master's theses and 36 of 72 Ph.D theses were completed under his direction by international students from 23 different countries. Most of the research was done in students' home countries, where many have become national leaders. In addition, he has had 21 post-doctoral research fellows in his lab, many of who have cooperated in his research projects. He and his students have conducted research in many countries.

Mount Kenya University holds its eighth Graduation Ceremony tomorrow. Under the theme Building a Research Culture, the ceremony comes hot on the heels of the development of a new, five-year strategic plan (2015-2019) that has renewed commitment on innovation and research. The university has also doubled down on physical and academic infrastructure, as well as market-driven academic programmes. These efforts have been feted on different fora, most notably the 2015 Ernst & Young World Entrepreneur of the Year Awards in Monaco, France, and the 2015 Talent Report by Corporate Staffing Services Ltd., that identified MKU graduates as among the top 10 most sought after by employers in Kenya.

Chair, University Council

Prof. Grace Njoroge, Ph.D

Our future economic and scientific success as the African continent is pegged on research. Research can increase the stock of knowledge that would uplift millions out of poverty. We have taken up this challenge and the new Strategic Plan refocuses our efforts in building a research culture.

Vice-Chancellor

Prof. Stanley Waudu, Ph.D

According to UNESCO, Kenya's Gross Domestic Expenditure on Research and Development is only 1%. This is a wake up call for all universities to take the lead in investing in research. At MKU, we will increase the budgetary commitment to the Research and Development Directorate from the current 4% to 10% of the university's gross income.

Chancellor

Prof. Victoria Wulsin, Ph.D

Research is at the heart of all academic activities that a university undertakes. We have benchmarked our research against some of the world's best. The existing partnerships with universities in the USA continue to play key roles in improving not only academic quality but also research-driven innovations.

Global Hall of Fame

Dr. Simon Gicharu soon after his induction into the World Entrepreneur of the Year Hall of Fame, 2015, last June. He was recognised among the best entrepreneurs in the world.

In what was a clear endorsement of Mount Kenya University as a stable, financially sound and sustainable institution, its founder and chairman Dr. Simon Gicharu was feted alongside 65 other top entrepreneurs from around the world last June. His name, and indeed that of the university, has been immortalised through induction into the World Entrepreneur of the Year Hall of Fame. The event was held in Monaco, France. "MKU is a CSR activity with an economic engine," he says.

MKU graduates are among the top 10 most preferred by employers

Graduates from Mount Kenya University are among the top 10 most preferred by employers in Kenya. A survey by Corporate Staffing Services Ltd shows that jobseekers with certification from MKU are much sought after. The 2015 Talent Report titled Hiring: Trends, Challenges and Future Outlook affirms MKU as first among equals. Other peer universities in the report included Strathmore University, Catholic University, USIU, Daystar, Kenya Methodist University, Kenya Institute of Management, African Nazarene, Presbyterian and Baraton University in terms of graduates acceptability. The report notes that the main reasons why the graduates from these universities are preferred are the reputation of the university in terms of specialization, years of existence and society involvement, for example MKU's Graduate Enterprise Academy.

Infrastructural Development

High investment in infrastructure bears fruit as CUE accredits MKU campuses in Nairobi

The University's ranking also improves to top 10 in Kenya

The Commission for University Education (CUE) has certified the four locations of MKU Nairobi Campus. In a move that saw closure of eight campuses of other universities in Nairobi, CUE accredited MKU's MKU Towers, MKU

Parklands School of Law, MKU Union Towers and Bank Plaza. Elsewhere, the university has improved its infrastructure in Thika, Nakuru, Kisumu, Mombasa, Kisii and Meru. At the same time, it has opened new Centres in Uganda, Burundi, Tanzania, Nyeri and Kericho. The university management believes that quality education can only be delivered in an environment of adequate infrastructure for learning, research and practicals.

SENATE PLAZA: The university is constructing a 13-floor building at Thika Main Campus. It will be commissioned by the end of this year.

KENYA'S FIRST: Lodwar Campus in Turkana County is Kenya's first university campus to be opened in the traditionally marginalized region. It was constructed at a cost of Ksh200 million, and is one of MKU's key private-public partnership projects.

KISII: A new location in Gensoso Ward in the outskirts of Kisii town complements the already existing facilities at Umoja Complex.

KIGALI CAMPUS: Construction of an ultra-modern Science and Research Centre at Kagarama, Kigali, is ongoing.

NAKURU CAMPUS: The new 8-floor MKU Plaza in Nakuru town will be complete by the end of the year.

SCHOOL OF LAW: The recently-acquired MKU Parklands School of Law building has received a major facelift.

KISUMU CENTRE: This centre along Oginga Odinga street is now a centre of excellence in journalism and mass communication training.

Godfrey Ngotho

Godfrey Ngotho was one of the eight beneficiaries of a Ksh800,000 grant from the MKU Graduate Enterprise Academy to establish a business. His start-up, Kipacha Web Factory, has attracted several clients including Nairobi water and Africa water Association (AfWA), Outlook Ltd, Consumer Options, Kenya County Web, Kisii Eye Hospital, Diamond Media Communications Ltd and Woodville furnitures.

Stellamaris Kathomi

At her company, Stejos Tours, she arranges events/holidays/team-building exercises for which she either charges a fee or earns a commission from the hosts - be it a hotel or guesthouse. "I stumbled upon this business idea after realising that on all the excursions we undertook as BBIT students at Nairobi Campus, I was always the one in charge of transport, accommodation and catering for the students," she says.

MKU students represent Kenya at the World University Games

Mount Kenya University students Peter Mwai, Nakeel Sylvester, William Waweru, Mathew Rapado, Mark Lokwanamoi and Caroline Waiganjo qualified to represent Kenya in the World University Games held in Gwangju, South Korea last month. Mark and Sylvester who travelled to Korea competed in the 10,000m race, and long jump, respectively. Kenya was ranked position 13 out of representatives from 147 countries. Like their contemporaries from MKU, they are current national and regional interuniversity champions.

Drama

MKU wins 2015 Kenya National Drama Festival

Mount Kenya University won the overall award at the 56th edition of the Kenya National Drama Festival held in Nakuru last April. In total, the university, which was represented by its various campuses scooped five out of 10 most competitive trophies, and 42 Certificates in the event that involved 21 universities. "We are an emerging powerhouse in theatre and performing arts in general," said Ruth Mutahi, MKU Director of the Institute of Film, Creative and Performing Arts.

MKU students celebrate with the trophies which they won at the 56th edition of the Kenya National Drama Festival last April. The university is keen on tapping latent talent.

YESTERDAY'S SOLUTION

CODEWORD

Each number in our Codeword grid represents a different letter of the alphabet. For example, today 11 represents P so fill in P every time the figure 11 appears. You have two letters in the control grid to start you off. Enter them in the appropriate squares in the main grid, then use your knowledge of words to work out which letters should go in the missing squares. As you get the letters, fill in other squares with the same number in the main grid and control grid. Check off the list of alphabetical letters as you identify them.

YOUR STARS

AQUARIUS | JAN 21 - FEB 19
The world around you is going faster than you are comfortable with. Be sure to take some time alone today in order to cool down and give yourself a break from the whirlwind of energy around you. You need a mental time-out from the insanity.
PISCES | FEB 20 - MAR 20
For most of the day you will be feeling on top of your game. Just make sure you don't get too over-confident. When you assert yourself today, you must realize that people who usually go along with what you say might actually snap back with defiance.
ARIES | MAR 21 - APR 20
The hostile attitude in the workplace is likely to have quite a negative effect on you today if you are not careful. Your sensitive nature is not fully equipped to deal with the bombardment from the people around you. Wear a suit of armour today.

TAURUS | APR 21 - MAY 20
You are going into battle as opposed to simply going into the workplace. You will feel at odds with the people you come in contact with. Someone is reaching for the stapler at the same time you are and you bump heads. It's just one of those days.
GEMINI | MAY 21 - JUNE 21
Your confidence will pay off. People are not going to have faith in a leader who is vacillating and hesitant. Demonstrate that you are a good leader by being assertive and sure of yourself. Hold your chest high and you will command great respect.

CANCER | JUN 22 - JULY 22
You will feel off-balance with the people in your office today. It seems that everyone is operating under a different wavelength, making it difficult for you to connect with people the way you need to. This is not the day to force a team effort.
LEO | JULY 23 - AUG 22
People are a bit jumpy around the office today, so proceed with caution. If someone rubs you the wrong way, try not to lash out at this person too harshly. Your tendency may be to do so, even without realizing it. Keep hurtful comments to yourself.
VIRGO | AUG 23 - SEP 23
TYou are ready to take the lead on a certain project at work, but unfortunately, it seems that one of your co-workers has the same idea. Sharing the leadership role is not going to be so easy, so don't bother trying. Find a different solution.

LIBRA | SEP 24 - OCT 23
Don't be a pushover today. Make sure you stand up for yourself when you know that someone is trying to hand you the short end of the stick. Be sure that you are getting fair pay and fair recognition for your services and hard work.
SCORPIO | OCT 24 - NOV 22
People aren't afraid to give you their two cents today even if you did not ask for it. As these opinions fly at you, you are likely to get more and more confused. Instead of trying to make sense of everyone else's opinion, just listen to yourself.
SAGITTARIUS | NOV 23 - DEC 21
People may look at you as if you are crazy today for suggesting the things that are on your mind.

Don't let them place seeds of doubt in your head. People may be weary because they are scared. Lead by example and demonstrate that your way is best.
CAPRICORN | DEC 22 - JAN 20
Power struggles get you into trouble on Monday; lay low until Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday when you don't have as much to prove. The Moon tries to rush you through your days on Friday and Saturday, so it will be ultra important that you take your time and not skip over any important steps
